Hair Clew In Slayings; Police Hold Two Suspects

Strand Discovered In Victim's Hand; Dispute Concerning Loan Seen Motive

BULLETIN

Leesburg, Va., June 3.—W. T. Clatterbuck, a Loudoun County resident, was being questioned by police early today in connection with a note he had given A. Morris Love, head of the murdered farm family, in receipt for a loan. Meredith Clatterbuck, his brother, told reporters that he knew of W. T. being held and said the questioning concerned a "note."

Leesburg, Va., June 2.—A single human hair under the microscope of Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy District coroner, tonight may decide the fate of two new suspects taken into custody in connection with the brutal bludgeoning and shooting of A. Morris Love, his wife, son, hired man and the hired man's wife near Purcellville Tuesday.

The tests being conducted by Dr. Rosenberg may disclose that it is from the head of one of the two men arrested as a result of information that one of them had signed his father's signature to a note for $2000, which was held by Love, and which was due yesterday. The other man is being held as an accomplis.

Tests to Show Age

According to information obtained early tonight, the pair was whisked out of Loudoun County to an undisclosed jail because of mounting wrath among residents here and fear of mob violence.

Sarah Love, 23, sole survivor of the Love family massacre, is the person who called her father's attention to a discrepancy in a note he held from one of the several persons to whom he had loaned money.

Dr. Rosenberg's tests are for vitality and texture to determine the age of the person from whose head it came, color and foreign substances, which may show the occupation of its original owner.

It was just such a test that brought about the arrest of two youths in Loudoun's last murder mystery, the robbery-killing of Ward Loveless, Washington and Leesburg attorney, at his home in 1941. A few strands of hair from a hat found on the scene of the crime provided the necessary clews.

Death Gun Was Son's

Three Overcome, With Mercury at 92 on Hottest Day

Three persons were overcome by heat yesterday as Washington sweltered during the year's warmest day with the temperature soaring to 92 degrees a few minutes after 3 p.m. And the Weather Bureau offered no relief for today.

The Weather Bureau forecast that today would continue to be sultry, with high humidity. Yesterday's low of 71 was recorded at 5:45 a. m. after which the mercury started to rise. At 8:30 a. m. the humidity reached a high of 88 per cent, but began to drop after sunset.

The year's previous high temperature was 89 on May 8.

Leslie Howard, 16 Others Lost On Airliner Attacked at Sea

LESLIE HOWARD, who was among passengers on a British airliner that "disappeared" en route from Lisbon to England

By the Associated Press

London, June 2.—A British Overseas Transport plane, with Actor Leslie Howard reported among its 13 passengers, was officially declared overdue and presumed lost today after reporting in a final message yesterday that it was being attacked by enemy aircraft while en route from Lisbon to England.

It was apparently the victim of German planes on unusually active reconnaissance along the seldom-molested air transport lane from neutral Portugal.

The names of the passengers and crew of four were withheld in the announcement here, but Lisbon reports said Howard was aboard.

In their daily communique, broadcast from Berlin, the Germans said: "Three enemy bombers and one transport were downed by German reconnaissance planes over the Atlantic."

The Airways announcement said: "The last message from the transport stated that it was being attacked by an enemy aircraft.

"The aircraft carried 13 passengers and a crew of four. Next of kin have been informed."

The plane left Lisbon yesterday morning and was due in England early last night.

It was the second British civil plane to be reported attacked on

Senate Passes Pay-as-Earn Tax Measure

Leaders Expect President to Sign Bill Promptly

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A new Federal tax collection system requiring individuals to pay as they go, and in most cases to pay more money in income levies for the war period, was headed for the statute books last night, after the Senate gave it quick and decisive approval by a 62-19 vote.

When the President signs the bill, as Capitol leaders had been assured he would do barring some entirely unexpected change of mind, an estimated four or five million individuals will be approximately "current" and up to date in their tax payments, and most of the others among the Nation's 44 million income taxpayers will become current during the next two years.

Start Paying on July 1

Service men and women will be eligible for new special war time tax relief, including basic exemptions of $2000 for single and $2700 for married persons, and total abatement of war income taxes for those who die in service during the war.

Wage and salary earners will start July 1 paying as they go through a withholding levy taking 20 per cent of each wage payment above basic exemptions, $12 a week for single, $24 a week for married and $6 extra exemption for each dependent.

Must Make June Payment

Taxes paid last March 15, and the installment due on June 15, which still must be paid, will be considered payment on the tax for income received this year, as well the amounts collected later this year by withholding. Those getting nonwage income of more than $100, all single persons expecting more than $2700 income this year, and married persons slated to receive more than $3500, will have to report their expected income September 15, and pay current taxes based on the estimate.

The need for paying the June 15 installment within the next two

Catroux Breaks With De Gaulle After Disputes

BULLETIN

Algiers, June 2 (INS).—Gen. Georges Catroux, who paved the way for the De Gaulle-Giraud conferences here, announced tonight that he had ceased political collaboration with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Fighting French leader, because of "heated wranglings."

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, June 2.—The six-man executive committee headed jointly by Gens. Charles De Gaulle and Henri Giraud decided tonight to meet tomorrow and declare itself the governing body of all French territory outside Axis domination.

Heated arguments between the two French blocs striving for unity caused the collapse of plans to formalize the existence of the committee today, but after further conversations a definite agreement was reached for holding the session tomorrow morning.

This decision apparently meant that De Gaulle had yielded in his demand that a purge of some Giraud officials, whom he regards as pro-Vichy, be carried out beforehand.

The committee intends to handle the case of each official whose loyalty to France and the Allies is questioned on a separate, detailed basis—a precedure Giraud has demanded.

The political maneuvering attending the emergence of a unified French group has produced some strange situations here.

Today, Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, who once was placed under house arrest by De Gaulle when he broke with the Fighting French leader, found himself a deputy commander in chief to Giraud and as such charged with maintaining security here—in other words the forces under him were guarding De Gaulle's movements.

In Honor of War Workers

Post to Bring Famed Artists In Starlight Concert Series

In a setting of unusual beauty—where fountains play amid the quiet of stately trees and lantern-lighted pathways—The Washington Post this summer will sponsor a series of 16 starlight concerts, beginning June 26, dedicated to the warworkers of Washington, to those whose daily effort and faith will bring this Nation closer to victory.

In Meridian Hill Park, where cooperation of the National Capital Parks Service has made this series possible, artists known and loved throughout the world will add the magic of their music to the summer nights, the stars and trees. Here, with the lighted fountains cascading softly to the sound of well-loved melodies, the men and women of this war-geared city will find charm and peace and relaxation.

It is a place to go on a hot summer's night, where you can cool off and enjoy an evening of quiet beauty.

Albert Spalding, greatest of American violinists, will open The Post Starlight Concerts at 8:30 p. m. on Saturday, June 26, and will play again at the opening of the Sunday series, on June 27.

Probably the only violinist of purely American origin to have achieved a career of international importance, Spalding is today among the first six great violin artists in the world.

His concerts have brought him before European monarchs and the plain music-loving people alike. But it is this type of concert he enjoys, the proximity to listeners and nature giving his music a poignancy and depth of meaning no one could ever forget.

The series will run in two parts—eight concerts on consecutive Sat-

Good Cuts Higher

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Meat-eating Americans will have to draw their belts a notch tighter next week, when the red stamps in War Ration Book 2 will cover the purchase of considerably less food.

The Office of Price Administration, which yesterday announced increases of one to four points a pound on nearly all beef products—including hamburger—said consumers who bought lamb, pork, veal, and variety meats would be able to keep their weekly meat consumption up to present pound levels.

But tables released at the same time showed they would have to concentrate on less desirable cuts to be able to do so. Sliced ham went up a point a pound, as did veal steaks and chops, and lamb chops.

More Points on Canned Fish

All canned fish, except oysters, crabmeat, sea herring and sea mussels, went up one point a pound, also. Oysters retain their present per-pound point value of three. Crabmeat, sea herring and sea mussels were taken from the rationed lists because inventories show them to be so scarce their rationing is not worth the paper work involved.

Dried beef led the point advance, going up four places. A pound of it Monday will cost 16 points, or the total week's red point supply for one person.

Every variety of beeksteak, except chuck or shoulder, went up three points a pound. Beef roasts went up two points a pound, except for round tip and that went up three. Stews and other beef cuts advanced one point, as did hamburger.

Tails, Tripe Go Down

Beef kidneys, tails, and tripe went down one point each.

OPA declared the new point values reflect continued large consumer demands for these items in the face of "lower production." The black market, however, will have to take the blame—and not "lower production."

The number of beef cattle in the United States remains at an all-time high, according to Department of Agriculture figures—but the number slaughtered in April was 17 per

Menace Fades

By the Associated Press

London, June 2.—Allied destruction of Nazi undersea raiders has been stepped up to the point where the German losses apparently are in excess of new production and where the number of submarines operating in the Atlantic seems to be definitely on the wane, A. V. Alexander, first lord of the Admiralty, told Commons today.

Asserting that destruction of submarines reached a new high last month, he said that the "number of U-boats destroyed in May will exceed the number which the enemy will have been able to bring into the war."

18 to 20 Sunk in May

He added that the sinkings in the last 12 months exceeded the number sunk in all the previous months of the war and that in the last six months the number was 25 per cent greater than in the previous half-year period.

The London Daily Express in its Thursday edition tonight estimated the number of submarines sunk during May at 18 to 20 and "possibly a figure even higher than this."

This damage inflicted upon the enemy undersea fleet more than balanced off the merchant shipping losses suffered by the United Nations, he said, explaining that even during the month of March, when Allied losses wer heavy, owing to a high output in new tonnage achieved in the United States, there was a substantial net gain in that month."

Pay Tribute to Air Forces

Paying a tribute to the work of the United States Air Force and the R. A. F. in bombing U-boat bases and ship yards, Alexander predicted that "as time goes on bombing of the building yards and component factories should have an ever-increasing effect" on the Battle of the Atlantic.

The persistent drive from all quarters upon the submarines indicated, Alexander said, that the Battle of the Atlantic was being won by stronger Allied escort forces and deadlier weapons.

Alexander's speech disputed German claims that the reason for the drop in tonnage sunk was because the United Nations had decreased the flow of shipping. During April, he said, "our imports were the highest since the beginning of 1942."

Strike Arouses Troops

Soldier-Poet Blisters Lewis In AEF's 'Stars and Stripes'

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, June 2.—The coal strike was the lead story this morning in the "Stars and Stripes," official paper of the American forces in the European theater. So intense is the soldier interest in the coal crisis that Lieut. Robert Moora, news editor, requested a 500 word special cable from the Associated Press.

Prominently displayed on "The Stars and Stripes" editorial page is the following poem by an anoymous soldier:

THE PATRIOT

GRIM goes the fight above the Nazi hills
Where vicious planes roar challenges of death
And bombs respond; where every Fortress tills
The field with havoc and the labored breath
Of valiant agony. This is the field
Which John L. Lewis will support with all the coal pits sealed.

HIGH overhead in hot New Guinea's sky
The yellow thunder bird rains bursting steel
And young Americans are there to die
That those who are at home may never feel
The curse of slavery. These too are the lines

FAR out at sea the hideous scream of shells
Yields to the blinding crash of flame and pain
And rolling in the sea's engulfing swells
Another ship has left its port in vain;
"One more provider for the front is lost
But John L. Lewies keeps the Nation's faith at any cost.
"One Nation, indivisible," he said,
And all the world has seen the Union grow;
But now another people's man has led America to faction. He must know
A better path to victory in this fray
For John L. Lewis is the Allied General of the day.

Death of a U-Boat

In a running fight with a German U-boat in and about an important Atlantic Allied convoy, the United States Coast Guard cutter Spencer sank the enemy raider with depth-bombs and gunfire, and took its flock of supply ships through unscathed.

Fifteen Washington men aboard the cutter helped win the clean-cut victory, which resulted in the capture of more than 40 members of the Nazi submarine crew.

The latter, declared the Navy's official account of the battle, were quite unnerved when picked up as their boat was sinking. Many were greatly impressed by the deadliness of the cutter's depth-charges, crying:

"Wasser-bombs, terrible, terrible!"

A soundman on the cutter picked up the submerged U-boat and the Spencer went for the sub, dropping its depth bombs. The German tried to get away by heading inside the convoy where the other ships' motors would drown out his own and nullify the cutter's detectors. But the Spencer followed, dropping its deadly "eggs."

With the convoy past and safe, the submarine had to surface from the blows it had taken. Gunners aboard the Spencer opened up. The Nazis returned the fire, slightly damaging the cutter and causing light casualties.

Round after round was fired at the sub, tearing its conning tower apart. The U-boat ceased fire, its crew began abandoning ship, and

Action Today Likely After White House Conference

Prestrike Rates Of Pay Probably Will Be Directed Pending Settlement

House Ire Stirred

Bargaining Suspended

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

An order by President Roosevelt directing the Nation's coal miners to return to work at pre-strike rates of pay was believed likely today—reportedly in accordance with decisions reached at an unprecedented White House conference on the coal stoppage yesterday afternoon.

It was considered possible that the order would be accompanied by a directive to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the mines, to take steps to offer work to miners who cared to abandon the general stoppage which entered its third day today.

Bargaining Suspended

Likely effective time of such a presidential order could not be determined, but officials pointed out that coal production for the rest of the week is as good as written off already—making Monday the earliest probable date for resumption of full production.

Attending the White House conference with the President were the four public members of the War Labor Board, two labor members, two industry members, Ickes, Undersecretary of Interior Abe Fortas, and James F. Byrnes, newly appointed director of War Mobilization.

The conference followed WLB referral of the mine strike situation to the President and issuance of an order to both miners and operators to refrain from collective bargaining on the issues in dispute until the strike ended.

Similar to Ickes' Proposal

It was understood that Ickes objected to this WLB order on the ground that collective bargaining conferees were near an agreement on a formula suggested by him. Ickes was reported to have proposed to the President that the back to work order be accompanied by a $1 a day increase in pay as a "temporary" settlement of the United Mine Workers' demand for "portal-to-portal" pay while a commission of experts determined the exact amount due.

Except for inclusion of the amount, this was substantially the same proposal that Ickes made to John L. Lewis, president of the

500 Nazi Planes Hurled at Kursk, 123 Shot Down

London (Thursday), June 3 (AP).—The Germans hurled 500 planes against the big central Russian base of Kursk yesterday in five attacks, losing 123 of them, Moscow announced early today. The Russians reported losing 30 fighters.

Announcement of this display of Axis sky strength caused immediate speculation on German intentions at a time when Allied observers were seeking the answer on the delay in the expected summer German offensive in Russia.

The broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor, preceded issuance of the regular midnight war bulletin which told as usual without details that "fighting continued" in the German-held Kuban bridgehead of the Caucasus; otherwise there were no essential changes on the long land front.

In the Kuban, the Germans say the Russians still are throwing thousands of infantrymen against their lines in an effort to crush the Axis bridgehead opposite the Crimea. The air forces of both sides were playing major roles.

Ships, Planes Blast Harbor At Pantelleria

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 2.—Shells from British warships have crashed into the harbor of Pantelleria in two heavy bombardments and American Flying Fortresses have delivered coordinated air blows within two days on that nearest Italian outpost to Africa, it was announced today.

In neither of the successful bombardments of the island, which lies 45 miles off the Tunisian coast and 60 miles short of Sicily, did the British suffer casualties. The Italian fleet appeared powerless to come in and fight.

The harbor area, Italian barracks and batteries of Pantelleria were hard hit overnight on Sunday-Monday and again yesterday. The first bombardment, said the Allied communique, was carried through without effective opposition. In the second, enemy shore batteries replied weakly.

Supported by Fortresses

This disclosure that the fleet had gone to work with new blows against the islands flanking Mussolini's homeland in cooperation with the Allied air offensive was accompanied by announcement that yesterday's surface attack on Pantelleria had been supported by a violent bombing assault by Flying Fortresses.

Pantelleria was raided from dawn to dark yesterday without letup, American medium bombers and fighter bombers joining the Fortresses in sweeps carried out on the average of every two hours.

Sicily and Sardinia also remained under attack in the unbroken Allied air offensive.

Heavily damaged were the Italian seaplane base on Stagnone Island, off the western tip of Sicily between Trapani and Marsala; shipping in the Sardinian harbors of Tercanova, Porto Ponte Di Romano and Porto Torres.

Single Allied Plane Lost

A single Allied plane was lost in these far-ranging operations. In the one air combat of the day 10 enemy fighter planes attacked a formation of American Mitchells over Terranova, but the result of the engagement was not made known.

At Stagnone, a considerable number of enemy seaplanes were destroyed or damaged. Three enemy boats were set afire in harbor before the Axis antiaircraft guns could get going well.

Italy herself was hit overnight by British planes based on Malta, a British communique announcing that railway communication in the southern Italian mainland was attacked.

The Italians officially acknowledged serious damage to buildings in the Pantelleria bombardment, but claimed damage to a British destroyer by Italian coastal fire. Widespread destruction by Allied air raids also was conceded by the Italians, who listed Naples as one of the cities attacked again.

War Sidelights

Air Fighter, Once Pastor, Likes Job

By the Associated Press

An American Air Base in Algeria, May 31 (Delayed).—After a month of combat activity, a 26-year-old "Arkansas Flying Parson," whose fellow crew members praise as one of the best B-26 Marauder pilots in the air, says he likes his job but wants to get the war over as soon as possible so that he can preach the peaceful settlement of disputes.

"War is definitely wrong, but we are all in this together and the man who pulls the trigger is no worse or better than the taxpayer who finances it," said Lieut. William Cone Stell.

"Brother Cone"—he comes from Warren, Ark.—gave up his pastorate in 1940 to become a buck private in the infantry and later switched to the air corps.

Rumanian Arrested

The German radio said in a broadcast yesterday that Constantin Bursan, former Liberal member of the Rumanian chamber of deputies and close personal friend of former Premier Gheorghe Tatarescu, had been arrested and interned on a charge of having made contact with British and American agents. The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said Bursan was shadowed on trips to Istanbul.

Yank Airmen Blast Mandalay Railway

New Delhi, June 2 (AP).—Medium bombers of the Tenth United States Army Air Force attacked Japanese railroad installations yesterday at Mandalay, damaging storage buildings, rolling stock and tracks, an American communique said today.

Liberators dropped 6 tons of bombs on a suspension bridge across the Shweli River near Loiwing on Monday. The announcement said denial of the use of the bridge to the Japanese forces would increase their difficulties in bringing up supplies during the forthcoming monsoons.

Chinese Annihilate Japs in Yangtze Area

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, China, June 2.—Chinese troops smashing forward all along the Yangtze front in central China were declared officially tonight to have annihilated all Japanese remnants surrounded in a Hupeh Province sector south of the river and to have launched an attack on the town of Changyang below the main enemy base of Ichang.

Northeast of Ichang, said a Chinese communique reporting a series of sharp successes in the counteroffensive against the Japanese invader, a number of points were recaptured.

In north Hunan Province, it was added, Chinese forces had regained three towns above the City of Lihsien and in this area, too, it was declared that the retreating Japanese had been surrounded and many of them annihilated.

Well to the north of all this action, in Shansi Province west of the Taiheng Mountains, the Japanese were counter-attacking.

The Chinese announced that in fighting between May 11 and May 24, more than 5000 casualties had been inflicted upon the Japanese in the mountainous regions east of Shantung.

One of the main accomplishments of the Chinese comeback—which has turned back a Japanese offensive in what China calls her biggest victory in the six years of the war with Japan—had been to put an end to a serious threat earlier posed by the invader to communications between Chungking and Hunan Province.

While reports from the field continued to tell of further gains for the Chinese land forces, official announcements reported a continuation of extraordinarily effective Allied air action in the central China theater.

Yesterday, it was declared, Chinese medium bombers under strong fighter plane escort powerfully attacked Japanese supply routes in the Yangtze Valley near the main enemy base of Ichang, dropping tons of bombs without meeting enemy fighter opposition. Further Chinese offensive patrols over the Yangtze also were not challenged.

pointed governor-general of Algeria, is the central figure in one clash between De Gaulle and Giraud. He submitted his resignation yesterday to both De Gaulle and Giraud, but the unexplained timing of his letters caused repercussions.

De Gaulle received Peyrouton's note before midnight, promptly accepted it, assigned him to a colonial captaincy in Syria—Fighting French territory.

Hours later Giraud also received Peyrouton's resignation note since he is co-president of the new executive committee and will alternately preside with de Gaulle at subsequent meetings.

Giraud told Peyrouton to remain temporarily in his post as governor general of Algeria, thus countermanding the de Gaulle assignment to Syria. Giraud's group pointed out that Giraud still is the only "lawful authority" in North Africa until the new executive committee becomes official.

The break between Muselier and de Gaulle occurred after naval forces under the admiral occupied the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off Newfoundland on Christmas Eve, 1941.

Today the Army has a new voice...

Industry is helping win the war... industry must help build a peacetime world

Fighting now is winning the war... Thinking now can win the peace

Today millions of service men are fighting for "a better world to live in." Other millions of individuals are performing miracles of production through the united efforts of management and wage earners—all of one mind—for "an unconditional surrender."

Tomorrow these millions will be permanently employed in peacetime pursuits provided they—all of one mind—dictate sound peace terms calling for sustained prosperity.

If the world is to prosper, there must be the same cohesion among the United Nations during the transition period and thereafter as now exists during the world-wide conflict. Internal stability here and in other nations can be gained and maintained only by sustained industrial production and by economic interdependence.

The people of this country, in common with the people of other lands, will prosper materially and spiritually when this war is ended but only if insistence, world-wide in scope, is now voiced for A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE.

Angry House Votes to Call Up Antistrike Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Angered by the second-day spread of the coal walk-out, the House yesterday called up the case-hardened Smith antistrike bill invoking far-reaching curbs against work stoppage in any war industry.

By a roll call vote of 211 to 163 the House gave a green light to the bill after a spirited fight by a bipartisan minority, opposed to legislating in the heat of the present mine crisis.

Debate opened at once, amid a flood of proposals to amend the measure previously passed in much milder form by the Senate, and studded with sharp "teeth" by the House Military Committee three weeks ago.

Modifications Considered

Two hours before the House voted to consider the bill, the committee considered last minute modifications recommended by Federal war agencies, who have voiced fears that the bill goes so far it may actually stimulate strikes and thus slow-down production.

The committee refused by a 11-to-11 tie vote to eliminate sections requiring 30-day strike notice and a secret strike ballot, which the war agencies said might "legalize" strikes.

Only two of the changes urged by the Administration were approved. Stripped from the bill was a previously-approved ban on WLB closed shop or maintenance of membership orders. Also eliminated was authority for workers in Government-owned plants to petition the WLB for wage adjustments. Federal agencies had opposed the provision, as extending collective bargaining to the Government field.

Criminal Penalties Provided

As the legislation moved before the House, the measure picked up the Connally bill's provisions for criminal penalties against strikes in Government-owned plants and subpena powers for the WLB, which the Senate had aimed directly at John L. Lewis. But it went far beyond, to outlaw jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, require registration and accounting by all labor unions, ban violent picketing, and punish by withdrawal of Labor Relations Act privileges strikes called in any war industry in violation of the bill. No strikes could be called without 30-days notice, and without a secret ballot of workers conducted by the conciliation service.

Administration Democrats, spearheaded by Representative Robert Ramspeck of Georgia, majority House whip, will fight today to restore the bill to much the same form in which it passed the Senate.

Ramspeck said last night that provisions of the Connally bill strengthening the hand of the WLB to deal with strikes and invoking heavy penalties against instigation of strikes in Government-owned plants could be used effectively by the Administration to end the mine walkout.

"If we adopt more stringent provisions in the House, the Senate won't take them and the legislation would be tied up indefinitely," said the majority whip.

In the forefront of the fight for a more sweeping bill were Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, whose 1941 antistrike measure was almost totally taken over by the Military Committee.

'43 Hosiery 85% Rayon, OWI Says

Eighty-five per cent of the hosiery worn by women this year will be of rayon, the Office of War Information reported yesterday in announcing there are no plans for rationing stockings.

The selection will be less varied than in peacetime, and the emphasis will be on wearing quality rather than sheerness.

Prices are restrained by dollars and cents ceilings which specify definite quality grades for each price.

Other points developed in the OWI report on hosiery:

Stockings will average 1 inch shorter than the same styles in prewar silk or nylon, because of the stretching qualities of rayon.

Hosiery will be limited to five colors in any style. This is hardly a wartime restriction, OWI said, since even in normal times few manufacturers had greater variety.

Under War Production Board ruling, the stocking must be reinforced in foot and welt for extra wear.

When the price and marking system goes into full effect in the next few months, every pair must carry marks identifying its quality.

The sheer rayon stocking of prewar days is prohibited, although the Government permits—but does not encourage—production of a new sheer rayon stocking made of a special type yarn and with a new mechanical technique.

OPA Appoints Carroll and Clark

Personnel shifts in the Office of Price Administration yesterday included the appointment of J. F. Carroll, St. Louis branch manager of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., as assistant to Harold B. Rowe, director of the Food Rationing Division.

Also appointed was Ellsworth E. Clark, former legal adviser for the Rural Electrification Administration, as assistant general counsel in charge of the Rationing Legal Division.

Carroll for the past year has served as consultant for Brig. Gen. Carl A. Hardigg, United States Army, chief of the Subsistence Branch of the Quartermaster Corps.

Clark, a resident of South Berwick, Me., has been with OPA since March 26, 1942. He formerly served as chief of the Food Rationing Legal Branch.

Army Reports Big Transport Plane Missing

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, June 2.—Lieut. Col. Willis Proctor, commanding officer at General Mitchell Field, announced today that one of his two-motored Army transport planes, en route from Colorado Springs, Colo., to Reno, Nev., had been missing since 8 p. m., mountain war time, May 31.

At Colorado Springs, Peterson Field officers reported 11 men were aboard the plane when it left there. A search is underway in southern Utah, Nevada and western Colorado.

Aboard the craft when it left Milwaukee were the pilot, First Lieut. George Adams of Gunnison, Colo.; the copilot, First Lieut. Earle V. Anderson, whose wife is living in Milwaukee; the engineer, Corpl. Warner L. Corey, son of Maj. Warner R. Corey of Bolling Field, and the radio operator, Corpl. Albert R. Schneider of New York.

Colonel Proctor said he had been informed others were aboard the plane when it left Colorado Springs, but he did not know who they were. One report was that they were enlisted men.

Four in Family Serving

Corporal Corey is the son of Maj. Warner R. Corey, who is engineering officer at Bolling Field and who lives at 523 Mellon Street Southeast. He is one of four brothers in the Army forces. On December 5, 1942, the fourth member of the family, Sherrill V. Corey, enlisted in a ceremony at Bolling Field, attended by the other sons, Warner, 24, and Donald, 20. All three sons became interested in aviation at an early age, inasmuch as their father, an aviator since the last war, has barnstormed and performed aviation work since 1925.

Sailor Exonerated

Frank Bodmer, 36-year-old Naval shore patrolman, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the fatal shooting of Marine Pvt. Joseph Witcufsky, 19, who was attached to the Navy guard battalion here.

The jury decided the sailor "shot while in the performance of his duty" May 21, when he fired a bullet into Witcufsky's back at Eighth and F Street Northwest.

OPA Instructs Housewives On Ceilings

By William L. Worden
Associated Press Staff Writer

A consumers' price institute to acquaint housewives with prevailing price ceilings and regulations and their role in the proposed price panels, which Joseph Egert, District OPA official, told them would be "the eyes and ears of the OPA," was held yesterday at Civilian War Services headquarters.

It was reported at the institute that two of the panels have already been selected this week, as OPA officials are attempting to get the program underway in an effort to assure adherence to price ceilings through better disemination of information, finer screening of complaints and more assistance in detecting violations. Cooperation of housewives was urged by Egert, as he pointed out that the OPA cannot purchase evidence.

Also speaking were Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, and Mrs. Minnie F. Rands, in charge of price survey work.

Davies Arrives At Minneapolis

Minneapolis, June 2 (AP).—Joseph Davies, President Roosevelt's emissary to Josef Stalin, arrived here late today by plane en route to Washington.

Davies came here from Seattle on an Army bomber and was taken to a downtown hotel where he planned to spend the night. His journey will be resumed tomorrow.

Senate Approves Trade Pact Bill, Sends It to Roosevelt

The Administration yesterday received unrestricted authority to proceed with the reciprocal trade program for two years, as the Senate beat down all changes in the act and voted final passage.

Unamended extension of the nine-year-old trade program in effect gave United Nations Allies the concrete assurance sought by Secretary of State Hull that Congress will stand by its postwar obligations.

Final Senate passage came on an overwhelming 59-to-23 roll call vote, after modifying changes were routed by much narrower margins. The bill was sped quickly to the White House for signature. The House previously had passed the extension in the same unrestricted form.

Opposition hopes of amending the bill had collapsed Tuesday, with defeat of key attempts to obtain either congressional review of trade agreements or power for Congress to end them six months after the war. But before the bill was passed a minority coalition made three more unsuccessful tries to place restrictions on the act.

These were:

An amendment by Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut to require Senate ratification of trade agreements by two-thirds vote. Defeated, 44 to 32.

Another by Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, to empower Congress to veto trade agreements by concurrent, majority vote resolutions, within 60 days after they are negotiated. Rejected 49 to 28.

Another by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, prohibiting any agreement to import any competitory goods whose landed costs after payment of tariff would be less than domestic costs of production. Defeated 47 to 32.

The strongest opposition vote came on the Maloney amendment, with 11 Democrats and 1 Progressive joining 20 Republicans in favor of ratification. Eight Republications lined up with 36 Democrats to defeat the amendment.

As in the House, Administration forces opposed every amendment on the ground that limitation of the trade law in the midst of the war would shake the faith of the Allies in the willingness of Congress to cooperate in much broader postwar world economic reforms. On that issue the bill won a number of Democratic and Republican votes otherwise opposed to the trade pacts.

A bi-partisan minority insisted reciprocal trade authority was an unconstitutional delegation of power to the President in the first place, and tariff powers should be restored to Congress. In his fight for Senate ratification of trade agreements, Senator Maloney said that unless the Senate asserted this right it might have to "count itself out" of passing on the final peace.

Only changes in the bill were made in the House, where the program was cut from three to two years, and permissive power was given to the President to withhold trade advantages from nations participating in cartels disadvantageous to this country. Both changes were acceptable to the Administration. As under the 1934 act, the President received power to negotiate three-year agreements in which existing tariffs could be lowered or raised as much as 50 per cent.

A flat seat gets harder, the longer you sit. It wasn't designed for rounded humanity. Regardless of the cushioning that nature provides, you want a seat that's shaped to fit you. Your rounded heels and arches are cushioned, too . . . but the longer you are on your feet the harder ordinary flat insoles seem. That's why thousands are switching to Cradle Heel Treds — the shoes that are shaped to fit for greater foot comfort. Designed by a famous Rochester, Minn. shoe specialist, the molded seat makes full use of the foot's own cushioning . . . for undreamed-of comfort.

How Reporters Reconstruct Slaying Scene

A. Morris Love sat on the front porch of his home talking money matters with a person known to him. They disagreed. Love was still figuring, using a pencil and the margin of a newspaper. The man stepped back a few paces, picked up a croquet mallet from a box and, with all of his murderous strength struck the farmer atop the skull.

But the murderer knew that Mrs. Love and son James were aware of his presence, probably knew what they had been talking about. Stealthily he eased the screen door open and stalked down the dim center hall. At the far end was a gun rack, on the table across from it a cartridge belt. A .22 caliber rifle was selected, several cartridges removed from the belt. In the dining room James was talking to his mother as she sewed. Suddenly he was dealt a terrific blow on the head. The killer then shot Mrs. Love and turned the gun on the son.

But there still were the Russells. Down behind the barn went the killer. Walter Russell was thinning corn. He was in the middle of a row, squatting, when he was struck, probably by a croquet mallet. Then he was shot through the heart. At the tenant house, Mrs. Russell answered the door and admitted him. It was an easy matter to shoot her, at close range, through the heart, as he had the others, and also through the head, since there was no one else alive to hear a second shot.

Somewhat panicky, he began hiding his trail. Love's pockets were ransacked and his wallet, containing the check was removed and placed in Russell's pocket and the gun placed beside him. A piece of bed ticking was removed from the clothes line and thrown about the bloody figure on the porch.

Then the murder drove off.

This reconstruction was predicated on the theory that the murder was committed by one person. Some persons believed that two were involved. In either event the essential circumstances remained the same in the belief of most observers.

Hair Found in Victim's Hand May Solve Mass Murder

In addition, it was disclosed that the .22 caliber rifle which had fired the death shots belonged to James Love, son of the farmer and himself a victim, and had been taken from a gun rack in the hall of the Love home. Two men, Johnny Parker and Raymond Lucas, both Negroes, were released early last night after being questioned all night and all day.

The conviction that Loudoun County still harbored the criminal was heightened by the expressed belief of Miss Love that the murderer was well known to her parents. But even before that news was bruited about the county, thre was a mounting wave of apperhension.

Where Next?

The question that lay uppermost in all minds was:

"Where will he (or they) strike next?"

Meanwhile, Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Harrison still maintained police are seeking the killer or killers virtually without definite leads. His statement brought no peace of mind to local people. Nor did he encourage equanimity when he declared that the manner of the murders was "deliberate, slowly executed, cold-blooded murder."

Harrison said: "It is my opinion that this was not a Negro murder." Late tonight, he told reporters he did not believe there would be any break in the case during the night. "I'm going home and go to bed," he said.

Capt. Edward McDermott, Virginia State police chief in the Loudoun section, told reporters he believed it was possible that the break in the case might come tomorrow night. His was the first indication that the intensive investigation may be bearing fruit.

Officials Disagree

Whether Captain McDermott's statement was predicated upon the new loan nonrepayment theory was not known, but it was at direct variance with the declarations of Harrison and the sheriff, who declared they "were as far from solution as they were yesterday."

Results of fingerprint investigations and ballistics tests by the FBI had not been completed. James Love's .22-caliber rifle and two pistols found in the house were taken to Washington early this afternoon by Sheriff Alexander and a State policeman, along with other undisclosed evidence.

Washington detectives who worked on the case throughout yesterday and last night were removed from the murder detail by Acting Chief of Detectives Robert Barrett, who said they would not be returned to it unless an angle affecting the District is turned up.

Funerals Arranged

A new somber note was struck as the investigation proceeded today when funeral arrangements for the two families were announced.

Funeral services for A. Morris Love, Mrs. Love and James will be conducted by the Rev. J. C. Murphy at the Harmony Methodist Church in Purcellville, where Love taught a Bible class, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Lakeview Cemetery at Hamilton.

The Rev. Paul Watlington, pastor of the Purcellville Baptist Church, will conduct the services for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Russell at Hall's funeral home in Purcellville at 2 p. m. tomorrow. They will be buried in the Berryville (Va.) Cemetery.

Allied Planes Again Pound At New Guinea

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), June 3 (AP).—Continuing the stepped up attack on New Guinea bases, Allied planes dropped 24 tons of bombs yesterday on Wewak, the high command announced.

This was the third heavy raid since May 28 on Wewak, a supply base 325 miles northwest of Lae. In addition, 100 tons have been dropped in three raids on Lae.

The Japanese air force, returning to action for the first time in several days, sent 16 planes against a small Allied detachment in the vicinity of Wau, 35 miles southwest of Salamaua, with slight damage "and casualties."

Four District Men Reported Among 107 Missing in Action

Reported missing in action by the War Department yesterday were four Washington area men, one of whom has since been found a prisoner of war in Italy. The Army announcement included names of 107 United States soldiers missing in the Asiatic, European, Middle East, North African, North American and Southwest Pacific areas.

Local men listed were First Lieut. Wyatt S. Kennon, son of Mrs. Jennie N. Walker of 236 Walnut Street Northwest, in the European area; First Lieut. Jarman G. Kennard, son of Earle H. Kennard of Seven Locks Road, Bethesda, Md., in the Middle East area; Second Lieut. Robert H. Calkins, whose father, Fred E. Calkins, now in Los Angeles, Calif., formerly lived at 1515 Webster Street Northwest, in the North African area, and Pvt. Norman R. Myers, son of Mrs. Bessie Mortimer of 4538 Davis Avenue Southeast, now reported a prisoner of war.

A former sports writer for the Diamondback, University of Maryland student publication, Kennon, 27, was born in Cherrydale, Va. After attending high school in Newport News, Va., he came to Washington at the age of 17. He was sports editor for the Newport News Times Herald and the Richmond News Leader before entering the Army Air Corps on November 7, 1941. Commissioned a second lieutenant last June, he went overseas in February. He has been missing since May 12.

A navigator with the Army Air Corps, Kennard has been reported missing since May 11. He was born September 5, 1921, in Ithaca, N. Y., and, a mechanical engineering major, was a member of the class of 1943 at Cornell. Enlisting in the Air Corps in January, 1942, he was commissioned a second lieutenant at Mather Field, Calif., in July, 1942, and went overseas last November. His promotion to first lieutenant came a month ago. Kennards' father, a Cornell professor on leave for the duration, is associated with the David Taylor Model Basin of the Navy.

Born March 3, 1922 in Washington, Myers attended the Holy Name School here and Bradbury Heights School in Maryland. He entered the Army on November 9, 1942, and was reported missing in Tunisia on April 7. Last week his family was told that he was a prisoner of war. Two brothers are also in the Army, Pvt. Frank Robert Myers and Pvt. Wallace Myers.

Also reported missing were: Sergt. Robert G. Markli of Annapolis, Md., in Europe and Tech. Sergt. Raymond M. Keating, jr. of Baltimore, Md., in the Middle East.

WPB Eyes Brass Rails in Theaters, Banks, Bars None

It's farewell to the old brass rail if the War Production Board has its way.

WPB wants more copper—pots, pans, gadgets in the housewife's kitchen—even ornamental brass rails in banks, theaters and Federal buildings.

Before the year is out, WPB spokesmen told the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee yesterday, everything made of copper or brass that can be replaced by another material may be demanded.

The hearing was called to consider a bill to authorize transfer of nonessential metal amterials in Government buildings, including air-conditioning equipment, for use in the war effort. WPB urged passage of the bill, pointing out that the Government must lead the way in sacrifice.

Nazis Hold D.C. Area Men As Prisoners

Some hope was held out for the safe return of First Lieut. Alfred H. Moss, husband of Mrs. Ruth E. Moss of 1501 Monroe Street Northeast, and Capt. William R. A. Kleysteuber of Auburn Gardens Apartments, Alexandria, Va., when they were listed as prisoners of Germany by the War Department yesterday. Previously they had been reported as missing in action in North Africa.

MOSS

A total of 35 U. S. soldiers were reported detained by Germany, while 89 were said to be prisoners of Japan.

A native of Petersburg, Va., Moss attended the University of Georgia, where he was a member of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. He was called to active duty in November, 1941, and went overseas the following April.

Kleysteuber, a native of Alexandria, received a reserve commission in 1939 after graduation from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and was called to active duty in August, 1941. He had been a captain in the cadet corps at George Mason High School. Before going on active duty, he was employed by the Washington Gas Light Co.

He was first reported missing on February 17, but his wife received a letter from a friend and fellow officer informing her that he had been seen alive after the action in which he was said to be missing.

Recently she received a letter from her husband saying that he was "uninjured and well," adding that he had seen a lot of Europe but not as he had expected to. He requested food in concentrated form.

Also reported a prisoner of Germany was Capt. Robert L. Walter of Baltimore, Md. Prisoners of Italy were Pvt. First Class Levering J. McCullough of Harve de Grace, Md., and, from Virginia, Pvt. First Class George E. Felty of Bristol, Pvt. William D. Kane of Holdcroft, and Pvt. Alfred J. Schnitzer of Portsmouth.

C. P. Taft Calls Recreation A 'War Need'

The public and their officials must be reeducated to consider recreation as a "direct war need," Charles P. Taft, director of community war services with the Federal Security Agency, said yesterday.

Taft and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, spoke in a panel discussion of the problem of dwindling recreation leadership in boom areas before several hundred local recreation workers, whose ranks have been thinned by a continual heavy drain to the Army, Navy and industry since the war. Hershey's remarks were "off the record."

The occasion was the annual meeting of the recreation division of the District Council of Social Agencies held at the Recreation Building at the West Potomac Park Residence Halls for warworkers.

Mrs. Casenove Lee, chairman of the recreation division, was re-elected for the coming year, and A. J. Kress, head of the sociology department at Georgetown University, was elected vice chairman.

New members elected to the executive board were James Cumiskey of Christ Child Settlement; Charles M. Fyfe of Washington Boys' Club; Donald F. Bautz of the Federation of Churches; Edward Rosenblum of the Jewish Community Center and Mrs. Eleanor Sutler of the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A.

Taft said that welfare and recreational services "are a different thing" now from what they were several years ago. "They are directed at those who are working."

Taft urged recreation leaders to find out "priority services" with a direct war need and concentrate on them. Unless the necessity for these services is established during the war, he warned, the chances are small that they can be started after the war when the public will be too busy "getting back to normal to bother with these frills."

Howard L. White of the Federal Public Housing Authority, who was chairman for the discussion, predicted that recreation problems in war boom areas will grow more acute in the coming year rather than abate. It was been estimated that 1,100,000 more workers will migrate to these areas in the next 12 months, he said.

Witnesses Tell of Mrs. Dempsey Visiting Woodall's Hotel Suite

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 2.—Two former hotel employes testified today that Hannah Williams Dempsey frequently visited rooms occupied by Benny Woodall and his sister, Mrs. Jackie Griffin.

Woodall, former trainer of lightweight champion Lew Jenkins, and Jenkins have been named corespondents in a divorce brought by Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion and now a Coast Guard lieutenant commander.

The two witnesses, Michatel Sidoriak, 23, coastguardsman and a former employe of the Hotel Woodrow in New York, and Anna Boyuka, former housekeeper at the hotel, testified they had seen Mrs. Demsey go to the tenth floor of the hotel "on three or four occasions." They said that when Mrs. Dempsey arrived, Mrs. Griffin would leave the rooms and stay in the lobby for a time.

The trial was resumed after a ruling by Supreme Court Official Referee J. Addison Young that Mrs. Dempsey's nervous condition would be insufficient cause for continued postponment..

After Dr. William Moore Kelly, appointed to examine Mrs. Dempsey, testified that Mrs. Dempsey was suffering "fright and apprehension," and her own physician, William Friedman, testified she was in a state of nervous exhaustion, Referee Young said that if postponement was granted and the case then came on again "she would be as nervous then as she is now."

Mrs. Boyuka testified she saw "on three or four occasions" Mrs. Dempsey enter room 2 on the tenth floor, and that Mrs. Griffin would leave "always just before Mrs. Dempsey arrived." She said she had seen an inscribed photograph of Mrs. Dempsey on Woodall's dresser.

Dr. C. B. Gamble, 82 Dies in Baltimore

Baltimore, June 2 (AP).—A brief illness caused the death yesterday of Dr. Cary Breckinridge Gamble, 82-year-old heart specialist, who was at one time a member of the staff of Dr. William Osler, one of the famed "Big Four" at the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

Dr. Gamble was a native of Tallanhassee, Fla., a graduate of Princeton and the Maryland College of Physicians and Surgeons, as well as the University of Maryland Medical School. For many years he was a member of the faculty of the University of Maryland Medical School.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter and a son.

Edward J. Murphy Rites Tomorrow

Requiem mass for Edward J. Murphy will be said at Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, tomorrow at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Murphy, who died at his home, 6205 Connecticut Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., was the past exalted ruler of the Elks and a former president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association.

Honorary pallbearers will be Ernest J. Leesnitzer, Walter Thompson; Dr. A. Thomas Utz; H. C. McKnew, G. G. Jones and Ernest Duval.

What kind of world do YOU want for him?

WHEN THAT BOY in uniform comes clattering down the gangplank with a grin on his face a mile wide, and an eagerness in his heart to start life all over again—what kind of world will he step into?

Must we face him and say: "Sorry, we haven't started to plan the peace yet." Or can we present him with a way of life worthy of his struggle and his sacrifice?

Because not only that boy in uniform, but you and every member of your family, will be affected by the shape of the peace. The home you will live in, the job you will have, the food you will eat and the clothes you will wear, will be decided by it.

Now, in the midst of war, when a common cause binds our nation together and links us so firmly to all the democracies of the world, now is the time to plan the peace.

To help you know, discuss, and take part in the planning of that peace to come, the National Broadcasting Company is inaugurating a new series of programs called "For This We Fight."

On these programs, to be heard over WRC, you will hear the basis for the peace discussed by leaders of American life in government, law, business, science, labor, agriculture, health, and education.

You will hear blueprints for the future presented by such men as: Cordell Hull, Sumner Welles, Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts, Elmer Davis, Eric Johnston, Thomas W. Lamont, James T. Shotwell, John W. Davis, Matthew Woll, James Carey, David Sarnoff, Senator Warren R. Austin, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Kent Cooper, James Lawrence Fly, Nelson A. Rockefeller, and many others.

You will hear how the promise of science can be realized, how trade and business can provide abundance for all, how labor and the farmer can achieve a new kind of security, how entertainment and education can make your life even richer and more rewarding. You will hear how the war can stay won.

"For This We Fight," presented by the National Broadcasting Company, is the first nation-wide program that brings together America's leaders and America's people, in a discussion of America's future under the peace.

To know, understand, and plan for the kind of world you want for that boy in uniform when he comes back, and the kind of post-war world you want for yourself... tune in to "For This We Fight" on WRC... 980 on your dial. First broadcast, Saturday, June 5th, 7 p.m.

cent lower than for that month a year ago.

For the first four months of this year, a report released yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showed, the number of Federally inspected cattle slaughtered was 9 per cent less than in the same period of 1942, but 19 per cent greater that the average for this period from 1932 to 1941.

Black markets undoubtedly have received much of the increased supply, observers declared, and BAE said their toll on calves had been particularly high.

"Inspected calf slaughter during April totaled 365,000 head, 27 per cent under a year earlier and the smallest April slaughter since 1922," BAE declared.

"The total for the four months, January-April, was 21 per cent less than a year earlier and 19 per cent less than the 1932-1941 average for the period."

Average live weights of cattle reaching legitimate markets this spring has been relatively high, despite reports cattle feeders have tended to market their cattle earlier than originally planned, BAE said. The average weight was given as 10 pounds heavier in March than a year ago and about 40 pounds heavier than the average for 10 preceding years.

OPA urged consumers to abandon past buying habits and learn to "consume those types of meat which are, for the present in greatest supply."

"Consumers who eat more pork, veal and variety meats during the next four weeks—and probably throughout the summer—will be able to get just the same number of pounds of meat for their points as they did during the last ration period," it was declared.

urday evenings, starting June 26, and eight on Sunday evenings, beginning on June 27. They will conclude on August 14 and 15, respectively.

Tickets for the concert seats will be sold at popular prices, at 50 cents, $1 and $1.50 top. Season tickets for each of the eight concerts will cost $4.40, $8.80 and $13.20, including tax. Reservations can be made at once through the Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street Northwest, Republic 3503. Sale of tickets at this address will begin next Wednesday, June 9.

At every concert, The Post will give 200 tickets free of charge, to 100 war workers from the various Government agencies, that they may share in an evening of musical enjoyment.

For the second concert in each of the series, on July 3 and 4, Carlos Salzedo, outstanding harpist, and his ensemble of two harps, a flute and a cello, will play. Described by foremost music critics as "a master and fantasist," with the finest qualities of both technician and colorist, Salzedo and his group come to The Post's Starlight Concerts after three years of acclaimed performances before audiences in the great cities of this continent.

The American Ballad Singers will bring the story of this country in song before the Starlight audiences on July 10 and 11. Under the direction of Elie Siegmeister, the six ballad singers take their songs from the days of the Pilgrim Fathers right up to modern times.

The programs which follow throughout the summer will maintain the same high standards, with the entire series under the management of C. C. Cappel, well known for many musical attractions he has brought to Washington in the past.

the Lisbon run. The first attack occurred last April when a Dutch pilot evaded an ambush of six Heinkels and returned to Lisbon with none of his passengers injured and with one wing of his British airliner damaged.

While planes operate between Lisbon and England at their own risk, it was generally understood they carry only civilian passengers. These sources said there was a slim chance that the plane could have been mistaken for a military transport.

Allied and Axis transports often idle side by side at neutral Lisbon.

Besides Howard, among those reported unofficially to have been aboard were Kenneth Stonehouse, 35, Washington correspondent of the British News Agency Reuters, and his wife, and Alfred Chenhalls, London film director and friend of Howard.

Lived on Q Street

The residence of Kenneth Stonehouse, former chief of bureau in Washington for Reuters News Agency, reported lost on a British plane, was 2511 Q Street Northwest. He was born in Capetown, South Africa, in 1909, and was educated there. Later he went to London as a correspondent for a South African news agency.

Roosevelt Directive Ordering Striking Coal Miners Back to Work Expected Today, Following Unprecedented Parley

United Mine Workers, and Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the Northern coal operators, Monday night, on the eve of the stoppage.

WLB members were said to have objected vigorously to any yielding to Lewis while the strike was in progress. All indications were that the President was prepared to uphold the War Labor Board contention that questions of pay rates and other issues in dispute could not be settled until the men were back to work.

The board brought with it a report prepared by Public Member Wayne L. Morse, in his capacity as WLB compliance officer, which stated:

"It is the opinion of the War Labor Board that the fundamental issue in this case involving the supremacy of law is perfectly clear and must be met by the Government."

Lewis Assails WLB Order

Soft coal collective bargaining conferees were meeting at Hotel Statler when the board's "stop-bargaining" order was issued. Conferences continued for several hours while procedure was discused, but no actual negotiations took place.

Later, Lewis issued a statement charging that the WLB action was "an unwarranted, illegal action."

"It is in conflict with the Wagner National Labor Relations Act, passed by Congress, which legalizes collective bargaining," Lewis asserted. "It is a malicious interfering action, designed to prolong the controversy in the coal industry, and is not in the public interest."

Northern operators were reported in disagreement with Southern operators with respect to the WLB order, with the Northern group indicating that it regretted the action because of the possibility of reaching an agreemnt through bargaining. However, it was learned that both groups decided to comply with the WLB order. Conferences will continue to keep the sessions technically alive, but no actual bargaining was expected to be done.

Morse's Report

Morse's report started as follows:

"Mr. President:

"The National War Labor Board, by unanimous vote, hereby refers to you, for such action as you deem appropriate, the existing dispute between the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators. As you know, several hundred thousand workers are out on strike in violation of the no strike pledge; in defiance of directive orders of the National War Labor Board; and in spite of the executive order of May 1 which placed the mines under Federal management pending a final determination of the case by the War Labor Board.

"This strike has no parallel, since Pearl Harbor, insofar as a reckless and wanton disregard of the no-strike agreement is concerned. Viewed from the standpoint of its damage to the war effort and its serious threat to the maintenance of Government by law and order, this strike probably has no parallel in American history."

Morse's letter asserted: "At each step of this procedure, on the part of the mine workers, under the leadership of their officers, there has been a direct repudiation of the no-strike, no-lockout agreement."

"The union has followed a policy," Morse said, "through the history of this case of insisting that negotiations be carried on either under the threat of a strike or with a strike in progress."

Nothing to Say

The White House conference lasted an hour and 45 minutes, breaking up shortly before 7 p. m. Secretary of the Interior Ickes, accompanied by Undersecretary Abe Fortas, was the first to emerge from the President's office. He was immediately surrounded by reporters.

"I haven't anything to say," Ickes grawled. "You know I never have anything to say when I come out of the President's office."

William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, came out saying, "Not a word."

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early also told reporters there was nothing to say.

Earlier, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, issued a formal statement asserting that steel production "will drop sharply late this week unless a flow of coal to steel plants is maintained, and practical paralysis of the production program will follow any serious curtailment of coal supplies."

Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, issued a statement on the coal situation, demanding:

"Who is the boss of the United States of America? Is it John L. Lewis or President Roosevelt? Millions of Americans are asking this question."

Byrd queried: "What hidden power has John L. Lewis so that he, and he alone, can defy the Government of the United States in an hour of the greatest peril this Nation has ever faced? Can anything be more destructive of the morale of these American boys who are fighting and dying on many foreign battlefields? Has the American flag which now flies over the coal mines of America lost its power and prestige?"

WLB Warns Both Sides

The War Labor Board telegraphed operators and miners that "any agreement on the issues reached by the parties while the workers are on strike and under the pressure of this strike coercion will not be considered or approved by the board."

It was this action that Lewis termed a violation of the Wagner Act. Instead, Lewis stated that the miners "are in support of and in compliance with" a request from Ickes to "reach a speedy conclusion of negotiation of a new agreement, in order to insure the continuous production of coal."

Lewis was reported to have gone into conference with district presidents of the U. M. W. No comment could be secured from him on developments.

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern coal operators, released a telegraphic reply to the War Labor Board order asserting: "We will not be parties to any discussion or action on any of the issues submitted to the conference by your directive order until the United Mine Workers have complied with the order of the board and returned the mines to production."

Burke Asks for Hearing

Burke also urged the board to grant a hearing "for the purpose of clarifying and defining the limits within which an agreement may be negotiated."

"Within the limitations above stated, we are attending the conference this afternoon in the hope that we may be of some assistance in bringing about an immediate resumption of the production of coal," Burke said.

O'Neill declined to comment on his action, but it was learned that the War Labor Board received the following telegram from the Northern group of operators: "The operators negotiating committee of the Appalachian joint conference acknowledge receipt of your telegram of June 2 and have accepted it as an estoppal of all negotiations submitted to us."

It was understood that the Northern group declined to sign the considerably stronger telegram sent by the Southern group because of their hope that some means of securing a resumption of bargaining might be found.

Burke authorized the statement, however, that "we are in complete harmony."

Break in Strike Front Appears

Reports from the coal fields indicated that the stoppage was virtually complete, with only few exceptions.

An estimated 15,000 A. F. of L. Progressive Mine Workers in Illinois remained at work, but 2200 Progressives in the Gillespie, Ill., area walked out after 350 members voted to "declare a holiday" in support of the U. M. W.

A slight break in the solid strike front appeared, however, when a group of 375 miners at Gallitzin, Pa., telegraphed President Roosevelt, saying: "We want immediate action so that we can return to work to protect our Nation and for the quickest possible victory over the Axis."

Hope of capitalizing on the patriotism of such individual groups of miners was said to have prompted the reported presidential decision to issue a back-to-work order.

The eggs from Secretary of the Interior Ickes' farm are above and beyond common ordinary grade A, B or C eggs—and sell for six cents a dozen above and beyond the OPA ceiling prices for said common ordinary eggs.

"Just eggs" can't sell for more than 50 cents in a big class 4 store, even with a carton thrown in, OPA has ruled. But these elite eggs, product of the Ickes' hens, are "jumbo" eggs, extra large and fancy.

That, in essence, was the way the floor manager at Magruder's, Inc., market at 1138 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, explained the fact that a dozen of these special Ickes' eggs bring six pennies more than the highest ceiling listed in the newspapers for his store.

And OPA officials concur. They recognized that some eggs are just too big to be associated with even Grade A eggs of the more plebean sort and provided for them in the regulations.

They call them "outsize" eggs, basing it on Department of Agriculture specifications for egg sizes. There are two kinds of outsize eggs—extra large, which must weigh 26 ounces to the dozen, and jumbo eggs, which must weigh 28 ounces per 12.

These eggs, then, you see, are something quite different from the three main kinds of eggs, small, medium and large—which, incidentally, weigh 18, 21 and 24 ounces to the dozen, respectively.

Mrs. G.K. Simpson's Funeral Saturday

Funeral services for Mrs. Gertrude Katherine Simpson, 714 Erie Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., will be held at S. H. Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, Saturday at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Simpson, who died at the Washington Sanitarium Tuesday, was born in Emory, Tex. She later moved to Dallas, where she was married in June, 1939. She came to Washington in 1941.

Mrs. Simpson is survived by her husband, Virgil R. Simpson, and a 5-day-old son, Roddy Cowan. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Henslee of Texas, and three brothers, Woodrow, George and Lieut. Hilton Henslee, also survive.

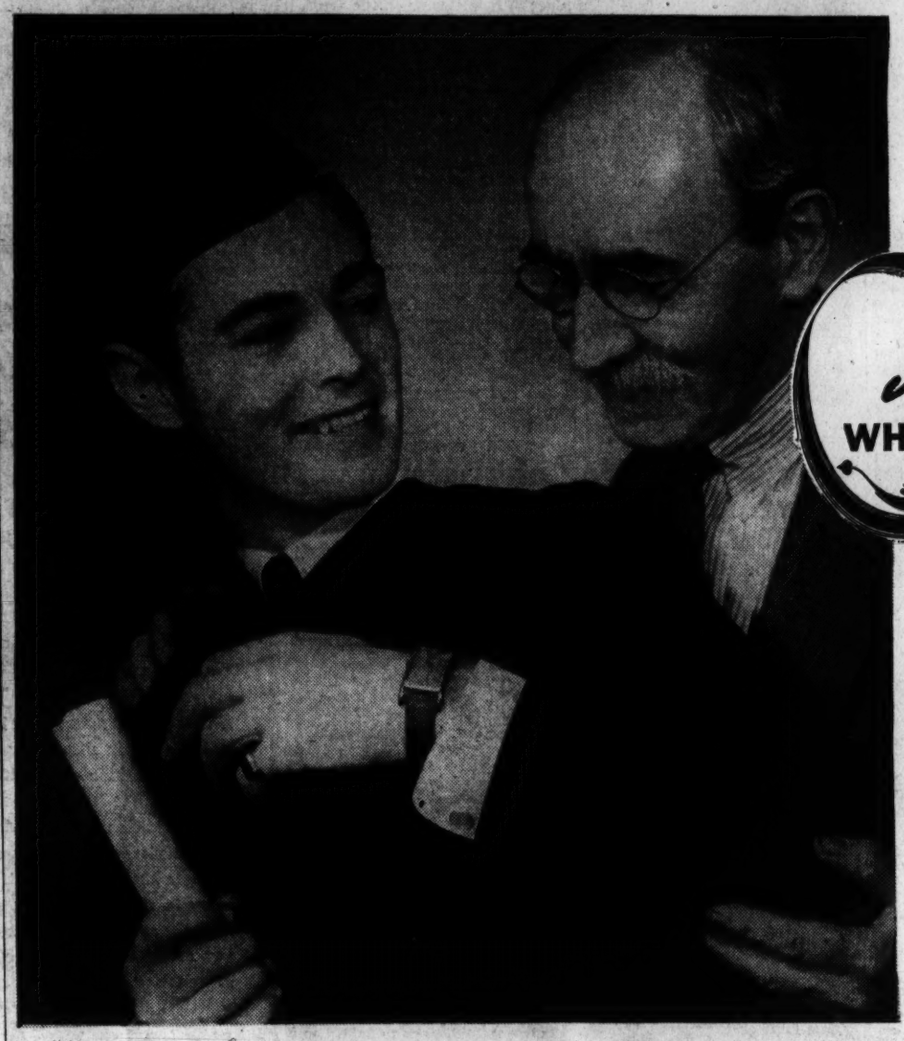
King Marks 'Official' 47th Birthday

London, June 2 (AP).—King George VI celebrated his "official" forty-seventh birthday today, nearly six months after the actual date—which is December 14—but there was none of the gaiety customary in peacetime and the King worked as usual on state business.

The anniversary is observed in June instead of December because the weather is more suitable for the traditional ceremony of "trooping the colors" and other celebrations.

Allied Fliers Hit 10 Barges, Engines

London, June 2 (AP).—Spitfires, Typhoons and Mustangs shot up 11 locomotives and 10 barges and destroyed an armed trawler and damaged three others in daylight sweeps today over northern France and off the Dutch coast, the air ministry announced.



It's Exactly WHAT I WANTED DAD

Dad has a way of knowing what the youngsters want . . . he's had years of experience at it. He knew you wanted a Watch for Graduation. So, he bought you just the Watch you wanted. Dad's experience helped him make another wise decision . . . CHAS. SCHWARTZ & SON seemed the likely place to buy it. Dad has been dealing here for years . . . we know him well.

Now, CHAS, SCHWARTZ & SON has TWO Stores. That gave Dad a bit of trouble, but he knew the same fine quality exists at both stores because after all, its the same company . . . still growing.

FWA Allots D. C. Venereal Hospital Fund

Allotment of Lanham Act funds totaling $80,443 for the maintenance and operation of a 100-bed isolation hospital for the treatment of venereal diseases at Gallinger Hospital was announced yesterday by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works administrator.

This allotment is designed to assist the District of Columbia in the cost of running the hospital, Fleming said. Only a few weeks ago the War Production Board, upon the insistence of the House District Public Health Subcommittee investigating health and housing conditions here, allocated priorities for the hospital structure itself.

At that time the war Production Board, which had turned down request for priorities for nearly a year, agreed to the construction of a new 50-bed hospital for venereal cases, to be added as a wing to the present 50-bed eye, ear, nose and throat hospital at Gallinger, which is being turned into a venereal treatment hospital.

The Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital, which was emptied of its patients yesterday, is being repaired and renovated and will be open July 1.

The new wing is expected to be completed within three months. Plans and specifications will be completed soon, and the wing is expected to cost between $125,000 and $150,000.

Since a much larger sum was earmarked by Federal Works Agency last August out of Lanham Act funds for a hospital at Gallinger for the care of venereal disease cases, FWA spokesmen said the funds for the building itself would certainly be available.

The funds for maintenance and operation alloted yesterday are expected to supplement District funds from July 1, 1943, through June 30, 1944.

WPB's governmental division, headed by Maury Maverick, changed its decision on the matter of awarding priorities after learning that the District of Columbia was infecting more than twice as many members of the armed forces with venereal disease than any other city in the United States.

Maverick was asked bluntly by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland what the WPB planned to do in this situation and finally received assurance of priorities.

The 100-bed hospital falls far short, District Health officials say, of the actual need of the community, which should have 300 beds for treatment of venereal disease cases.

C. C. Dannaker's Rites to Be Held In D. C. Today

Funeral services for Charles C. Dannaker, 59, will be held today at 1 p. m. at Hines' funeral home. Interment will follow at Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Dannaker died Tuesday at Doctors Hospital after a heart attack. A native of Ridley Park, Pa., he came to Washington 23 years ago and entered the service of the Bureau of Internal Revenue after leaving the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corp. Until the recent decentralization he was assistant chief of the fraud section.

An active Mason, Mr. Dannaker belonged to Barristers Lodge No. 48, Columbia Chapter No. 1, R. A. M.; Washington Commandery, Knights Templar and Almas Temple. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rita Dannaker of Argonne Apartments.

Dr. Dafoe, Physician to Dionne Quintuplets, Succumbs at 60

North Bay, Ont., June 2 (AP).—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, 60, the little country doctor who attended the birth of the Dionne quintuplets and cared for them through the first years of their famous lives, died today of pneumonia.

Brought here by ambulance from Callander this morning, he died a few minutes later after having been in poor health for several months.

His death deeply moved the five little girls whose lives he saved in the difficult hours and days of their premature birth.

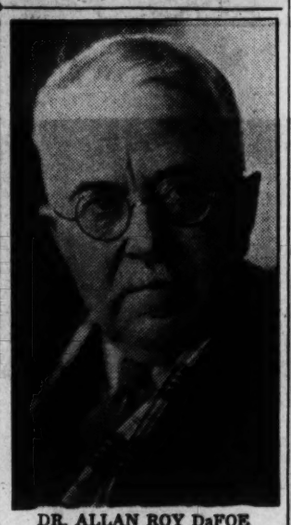
"We will ask God to take care of his soul," said Emilie, at Callander.

The world suddenly became aware of Dr. Dafoe nine years and five days ago when at 4 a. m. in a frame farmhouse he attended Mrs. Dionne and the five babies, premature by two months. Not only did he have to attend Mrs. Dionne who suffered a hemorrhage but he had to improvise beds in a basket and nourish the weak babies through an eye dropper.

Aid soon poured in from Canada and the United States, incubators were installed, nurses found, money provided and despite an attack of jaundice the five girls lived through their first difficult weeks.

"The Little Doc," as he was known in the district, followed the methods he had used in years of rural practice and continued his regular rounds even after his name became as well known as those of his charges.

It was on February 14, 1942, that Dr. Dafoe finally gave up his connection with the quintuplets. He offered his resignation to Mitchell Hepburn, then premier of Ontario, "because his position has been made almost impossible by reason of the fact that the children are not allowed to speak English." Later he explained that he resigned because "I felt that my usefulness had come to an end."



DR. ALLAN ROY DaFOE

Mrs. Julia A. Poore Dies at 75

Requiem mass for Mrs. Julia A. Poore, 75, will be said in Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Poore died at the home of her daughter, 1415 Girard Street Northwest, Tuesday. She was born here and attended the public schools of this city. She was a member of the National Capital Auxiliary Post 127, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American War Mothers.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lillian P. Sawyer and Mrs. Louise J. Schofield, and a son, Louis W. Poore.

Supersleuth To Return Here

David S. Ennis, Police Department supersleuth who quit the Metropolitan force after three months' disillusioning experience last October to go back and be police chief of Whitemarsh, Pa., is back again to have another fling as special investigator on the force.

Police Superintendent Kelly explained to the Commissioners that Ennis had "reconsidered his action in resigning, and had applied for reinstatement." Since his previous withdrawal from the panel of crack detectives brought in to bolster the Police Department was accepted without prejudice, since nobody else had been selected to succeed him in the past eight months, and since he had had three months' training before he went home to Whitemarsh, the Commissioners agreed that it would be preferable to have Ennis succeed himself than to bring in an entirely new man.

Dr. L. S. Rudasill's Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. Lewis Singleton Rudasill, 70, will be held in Gorsuch Methodist Church tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. The body will lie in state at the church from 12 until 2 p. m. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemtery.

Dr. Rudasill, who died at the parsonage of the Gorsuch Church, 1105 Fourth Street Southwest, Tuesday, was born in Front Royal, Va. He received a B. A. degree at Randolph-Macon College and then attended Temple University. He later received his Doctor of Divinity degree at Oscaloosa University in Oklahoma.

He traveled quite extensively throughout this country and Europe, and gave many lectures on his travels. He had been a minister in the Baltimore Conference for 40 years, and had been pastor of many churches including St. John's of Hamilton, Baltimore and pastorates in Salem and Roanoke, Va. He had served the Gorsuch Methodist Church for the past two years.

Dr. Rudasill is survived by his wife, Mrs. N. Elizabeth Rudasill, two daughters, Mrs. Elvira Sommerville Ruble of Chestertown, Md., and Mrs. Davis Soufley of Martinsburg, W. Va., and two sons, Dwight A. of Baltimore, Md., and Lewis Singleton, jr., of Washington.

Pictures by War Zone Children to Be Exhibited in Capital

Peace and the simple beauty of normal life fill the dream world of children who have known war—if their sketches and paintings truly reflect their minds.

Out of Britain's air raid shelters, from the internment camps in France, the bombed-out huts of China and the Spanish refugee centers in Central America came the selection of 116 sketches which the American Friends Service Committee will exhibit at the Children's Art Center, 1744 K Street Northwest, through the month of June.

The opening of "Children's Paintings from War-Torn Countries" will be Saturday at 4 p. m. and will be attended by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Lady Halifax and Madame Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador.

Collected by Friends relief agents in European and Asiatic war areas, the paintings were produced under the most adverse circumstances by children who have been driven from their homes, many of whom have lost their parents and others who are too young to have known anything but their present plight.

The Children's Art Center in Washington was organized as a WPA project in 1938. Last year Federal funds were withdrawn, but because of the interest shown by the children, Mrs. Foreman declared, activities were continued. At present, 200 children are receiving instruction every week, with hundreds more on the waiting list.

"We hope to get some funds from the Council of Social Agencies," Mrs. Foreman said, "because we have convinced people that the activities of the art center are even more important now, in wartime, than they ever were before."

10 Navy Casualties

The Navy announced yesterday 10 casualties including 1 dead and 9 missing. None were listed from the Washington area.

This brings to 23192 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7880 dead, 4706 wounded and 11,136 missing.

Stage Door

A convoy headed for Gibraltar passed a convoy returning from Tunis. "What's doing in New York?" signaled the incoming signalman. "Take in the Stage Door Canteen," came the answer. In Washington alone the American Theater Wing Stage Door Canteen has played hostess to an average of 2000 servicemen a night, over a period of seven months. Private or general, soldier or sailor, American or Norwegian, in fact, any man wearing the uniform of one of the United Nations, is welcome from 6 to 12 every evening. Women in uniform are invited Sunday afternoon. Supper and soft drinks are "on the house." There is always a good band for dancing and professionals for entertainment. A sailor fresh from the line of duty may find himself spinning his favorite screen star to a waltz, laughing at an Abbott and Costello act, or even listening to Heifetz or Menuhin. They say it's a Commando course to reach the dance floor.

Every night a crew of hard-working volunteers shoulder the womanpower shortage, but the financial burden must be met by voluntary contributions. The Canteen, therefore, welcomes the generous offer of the Willard Hotel to donate the proceeds of the opening night of their Willard Roof Music Hall to the cause. On Monday, June 7, at 8:45 o'clock p. m., Richard Midgley will present his gay-nineties burlesque of "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl." Skits and songs by the Ben Yost Barber Shop Quartet will enliven the entr'actes, and beer and lemonade may be had at small tables. Surely the public will gladly respond to this opportunity to contribute painlessly to the fine work of the Canteen. Tickets at $2.20 are now on sale at the Stage Door Canteen, Shubert Belasco Theater, Executive 1519, and at the Talbert Ticket Agency in the Willard Hotel.

Hot Money

Inflation marches on. Leon Henderson, former price administrator, estimates that there will be a gap of 40 billion dollars this year between disposable consumer income and the value of goods and services available for purchase at current prices. He observes that 40 billion dollars is "a lot of savings in any language or climate. Forty billion dollars of additional hot money either burning in the pants of individuals or wondering what's a good buy in the real estate or stock markets." Well, both the real estate and the stock market are already acting as a magnet. And under present conditions there is great danger that the hot money will be used to bid up unduly the prices of securities and capital goods as well as consumer goods, with equally disastrous effects on the price structure.

Already there are indications of an incipient land market boom. It is caused partly by the tremendous rise that has occurred in prices of farm products and partly by fears of inflation. Land is traditionally thought of as a hedge against inflation. The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago has just completed a survey of land values in the Seventh Federal Reserve District covering the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan. On the basis of replies from more than 600 member banks in the area the Chicago Reserve Bank estimates that land values for the entire district are 16 per cent higher than a year ago. The particularly disturbing aspect of this advance is that local bankers believe that the current value of improved farm land is above normal—that is, above the value of that land based on its long-time earning power. For Indiana, values are estimated to be 24 per cent above normal; for Illinois, 21 per cent, with lesser percentages for the other three States. Fortunately, down payments on recent land purchases are said as a rule to have been "substantial." That means that the mortgage indebtedness will not be so hard to carry when, or if, prices of farm products decline and incomes fall.

A considerable percentage of recent land purchases in the Chicago District have been made by nonfarmers either as a hedge against inflation or as a possible refuge in case of trouble. Such buyers may find they have made a bad investment and may ultimately suffer considerable losses. But their miscalculations are not nearly so serious as those of an operating farmer who buys land at inflated values. The farm problem that has plagued this country ever since the last World War was caused to a very large extent by overindebtedness of the farm population, especially by mortgage debts incurred to buy overvalued land. When the postwar price collapse came, the mortgage burden proved too heavy to carry in countless cases. The effort to meet debt payments added to the pressure of surplus crops and aggravated the deflationary pressure. The result we know: widespread agricultural distress; mortgages foreclosed, banks loaded with unsalable farm lands, an epidemic of bank failures, and universal distress.

Farm spokesmen have solemnly asserted that never again would farmers be so foolish as to speculate in farm land bought at the top of the market. But history has a way of repeating itself when the conditions making for foolishness recur. So it is likely to be this time unless the Government undertakes to capture a good deal more of excess incomes that is burning holes in pockets by taxing more heavily and by speeding up sales of bonds to individual investors.

Too Many Cooks

The coal crisis has run full cycle. We are back now where we were when the miners went out on strike a month ago. Now, as then, it is impossible to tell whether the Government's authority in this situation rests with the War Labor Board or with the solid fuels administrator. They are working at cross-purposes and are being played off against one another by the unscrupulous maneuvering of John L. Lewis. The miners are told that they are striking against the Government, but they are also told to bargain for their demands with their former employers, the coal operators. If they are confused about the real issues, it is not only because they have been deceived and misled by Lewis but also because the policy of the Government has been contradictory and confusing.

There is one basic issue in this crisis which transcends in importance any question of wages or working conditions. That issue is simply whether men, in wartime, shall be allowed to gain their ends by striking—by an interruption of the Nation's war production. If the coal miners win what they desire by striking, then, understandably enough, organized workers everywhere will feel impelled to resort to the same tactics. For this reason it is imperative that the strike be ended before any concessions whatever are granted to the strikers.

No member of the Federal Government—neither Secretary Ickes, nor the War Labor Board, nor Mr. Byrnes, nor even the President himself—should bargain with men who are out on strike. There should not now be, and there should never have been, talk of a truce with John L. Lewis at a time when he was defying the Government. This Nation has orderly procedures for the settlement of industrial disputes. They must be observed. Chaos is the sole alternative. Until the coal miners are back at their jobs, ready to utilize the governmental machinery available to them, there should be no dickering, no bargaining, no concessions.

Too many ladies have stirred this stew. Only the President himself can now deal with it. He can deal with it by telling the strikers that absolutely nothing will be done about their demands until they return to work. His subordinates should be instructed accordingly. None of them should have any traffic whatever with Lewis or any other spokesman of the miners until this minimum requirement has been met. Negotiation with the coal operators under the auspices of the WLB should be suspended. Only thus can the miners be made to see the true issues which Lewis has obscured. We want no more truces with dictators, no more bargaining by blackmail.

Family Concern

Henry Ford's resumption of the presidency of the Ford Motor Co. which he relinquished nearly a quarter of a century ago to his son has not silenced speculation as to the future of the company under its new management. The close identity between active management and ownership which makes the company outstanding in our industrial annals has already been impaired because Mr. Ford has reached an age when he must necessarily entrust the management of affairs very largely to his associates. Furthermore, it is conjectured that the inroads of the inheritance tax may compel a sale of part of the Edsel Ford holdings to persons outside the family group. Even if dispersion of holdings can be avoided this time, the cumulative effect of inheritance taxes is bound ultimately to make itself felt.

Most Americans would experience a rather nostalgic regret if the personal ties linking the company to the family were broken. That is probably because the concern resembles in the manner of its upbuilding and management many small and medium-sized businesses created by the hard work of family heads who have passed along their responsibilities to their children. This may be said in spite of the mammoth size of the Ford concern.

The Ford company, in point of fact, is the antithesis of the typical large-scale corporation of today. The ownership of such a corporation is divorced largely, if not entirely, from management. The officials who direct our great modern enterprises are salaried representatives of the owners, sharing only indirectly in profits. This system, despite certain disadvantages, is better suited to the social and industrial conditions of the present day than the type of organization in which owner interests are dominant. For it is not in the public interest to permit any individual, however wise and efficient he may be, to wield excessive power in the industrial world by virtue of ownership alone. The hired man—even if his hire runs into huge sums—can be held to an accounting of his stewardship. The owner-manager is accountable to himself alone. So long as his sphere of influence is reasonably restricted, such a man may often achieve better results than a salaried manager. In any case, there is no reason to fear an abuse of power on his part. The situation is very different, however, when an owner-industrialist heads an undertaking so extensive that its operations affect the lives and fortunes of thousands of his fellow men.

The threat to the continuance of the Ford regime is a reminder that the country, for better or worse, has left behind it the era when great fortunes could be amassed and transmitted to posterity in the hope of establishing vested family interests in any industry or group of industries. Excessively high estate and gift taxes make inroads into family fortunes that force liquidation of inherited properties. And the process of disintegration resulting from partitioning holdings among multiple heirs does the rest. But, as a matter of fact, even in the days when taxes were no bar to the accumulation and transfer of great fortunes, family domination over great industrial units of the Ford type were uncommon. Even the Rockefeller interests in Standard Oil were shared with others. And most of our greatest family fortunes were built up by financial operations in the investment field, rather than by application of managerial skill to specific industrial enterprises. The progressive divorce of ownership from industrial management has, therefore, not been the major operation that many conceive it to have been.

Dunkerque

It was three years ago this week that the British Army, the Royal Air Force, the British Navy and, above all, the British people carried out that "miracle of deliverance" which was the Dunkerque evacuation. The event marked Britain's darkest hour. It likewise marked her finest moment. To have rescued 335,000 men trapped on the beaches was an epochal feat. How it was done constitutes a story of valor and fortitude that ranks with the best that the long and troubled history of mankind has to offer.

Was Dunkerque a victory or a defeat? "We must be very careful," said Winston Churchill, on June 4, 1940, the day the Germans marched into Dunkerque, "not to assign to this deliverance the attributes of a victory. Wars are not won by evacuation." The admonition was salutary. None knew better than Churchill the extent of British helplessness after Dunkerque. She had been stripped of heavy artillery and tanks and even rifles. She was wide open to invasion. Yet, for all of Churchill's sound admonition, the British then or later refused to regard Dunkerque as any other than a victory. History now underlines the soundness of this folk wisdom. For Dunkerque was a victory, one of the greatest and most decisive of the war, a victory of the spirit that after many months of blood, sweat, toil and tears was to produce recognizable military triumphs.

So today, wherever free men gather on the farms and in the factories of America, in the charnel house which is Hitler's Europe, on the far-flung battlefields of Russia and New Guinea and the Aleutians, a toast will be in order to the nameless thousands of the "little men" of Britain who manned the boats and the planes or who stood patiently along the bombed and machine-gunned beaches and who with Churchill said, "We shall never surrender." We offer it ourselves with this tribute.

Curb On Executive

Wisely the Senate has broadened the restrictions imposed by the House upon the utilization of the President's emergency fund. Instead of specifically forbidding the use of the fund to rescue the National Resources Planning Board and the Farm Security Administration, as the House did, the committee voted to ban the use of the current emergency fund "for any of the functions of any agency of the Government for which appropriations have been duly made by Congress, or for functions for which estimates have been submitted by the Budget and for which Congress has failed to make appropriations." The purpose of this restriction (which exempts allotments made to the Army and Navy) is patent. It is designed to keep the President from thwarting the will of Congress by supplementing appropriations that Congress had previously cut or replacing appropriations Congress had refused to vote. Congress has been amazingly quiescent in face of executive abuse of the spending power and should have taken a decisive stand long ago. The Senate has outlined a plan of action that ought to be indorsed not simply as a temporary expedient, but as a permanent device to keep the Executive from using the spending power conferred by Congress to circumvent legislative mandates.

HERITAGE

Where water folds across the stones,
A kid glove over knuckle bones

And idles into pools, the trout
Lifts his speckled body out

Once, twice, and thrice he hurls
A whip of steel against the swirls

Then leaps the rapids, and in air
Curves a note of music there

And with a swift contrary will

Chile Today

By John W. White

Foreign Policy

CHILEANS, STILL smarting from criticism of their delay in breaking with the Axis, hope the visit of President Juan Antonio Rios to Washington in June will become an occasion for showing the people of the United States the close similarity that exists between Chilean democracy and their own. Chileans argue that it was their strong democracy and the slowness of the democratic process, rather than sympathy with the totalitarian powers, that delayed their abandonment of neutrality. Nothing has pleased them so much in years as Vice President Wallace's statement in his Central Park address that nowhere in his South American tour did he find greater pride in democracy than in Chile.

Chile is lined up with the democracies today, say the Chileans, because they wanted it that way, not because a dictator made the decision over their heads. They argue that because their country is one of the very few real democracies in Latin America their President could not abolish neutrality on his own initiative, as was done in several of the other American republics.

United States official circles in Santiago have confirmed to this correspondent the Chilean contention that when President Rios was inaugurated on April 2, 1942, public opinion was identical with that of our own West and Middle West up to the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor. Most Chileans wanted the democracies to defeat the totalitarians. They were willing to contribute to that defeat by speeding up their production of metals, nitrates and other strategic materials for the use of the United States and the other democracies. But most Chileans saw no good reason why they should become involved in the actual conflict.

Chilean Isolationists

Chilean isolationists pointed to their country's 2600 miles of undefended Pacific coast to support their arguments against becoming involved in the conflict. They also pointed to Japan's public threat to invade that coast if Chile should abandon neutrality. Chileans freely admit that there was considerable fear of such an invasion up to the time the United States Navy halted at Midway the Japanese advance in Chile's direction.

Responsible Chileans also admit that a large block of public opinion was influenced by the numerous and prosperous German population. Wealthy German industrialists, gentlemen farmers, bankers and professional men have intermarried extensively into prominent Chilean families and made themselves popular in the highest society. These Germans told their Chilean relatives and friends that Hitler could not lose. The conservative and liberal parties to which these relatives and friends belong control nearly half the votes in the Senate, which had to be consulted before neutrality could be abandoned.

President Rios

President Rios had to overcome these circumstances and break down isolationist public opinion before he could line up his country on the side of the democracies. His admirers point out, however, that in his first address to the country as President-elect he declared for continental solidarity, cooperation with the United States, and compliance with the international obligations which Chile had signed at the inter-American conferences at Buenos Aires, Lima, Panama and Havana.

Barros Jarpo fell as a result of Sumner Welles's now famous Boston speech, in which he accused Chile of harboring a Nazi spy organization. To replace him, President Rios appointed as Minister of Foreign Affairs Senor Joaquin Fernandez, a man who was convinced that the Axis already has lost the war. The new minister set to work at once to help the President terminate neutrality.

It has been officially announced that Senor Fernandez will accompany President Rios to the United States, largely because Sumner Welles expressed the hope that he would be made a member of the presidential party. Chileans interpret this as a Good Neighbor gesture intended to indicate that the Boston remarks were directed against a particular individual, not against the Chilean Foreign Office.

President Rios is intensely interested in postwar planning to make democracy more secure in the southern republics than it has been in the past. He believes the best way to accomplish this is by removing tariff barriers and making the Western Hemisphere a strong economic bloc by increasing trade among all the republics, thereby making them less dependent than in the past on European markets. He believes this would increase and diversify production, thereby raising the standard of living and creating a better balanced economy in all the countries. He is convinced that when the working classes of South and Central America are better fed, better clothed and better housed they will be less responsive to all anti-democratic propaganda.

It has been announced that President Rios is taking with him to Washington several projects which he believes will contribute to this end and that he expects to discuss these projects with President Roosevelt and the Presidents of the other countries he plans to visit.

Hitler's Dilemma

By Barnet Nover

The Specter Of 1918

THE INK was hardly dry on the Armistice agreement of November 11, 1918, which ended the First World War when the German army began to prepare for its sequel.

These preparations took many forms, and even before Hitler appeared on the scene had begun to leave their mark on German national life. They were, of course, enormously stepped up after the Nazi dictatorship was established.

But at every stage of the German army's rehabilitation and expansion, whether under the republic or under Hitler, Germany's war preparations were dominated by the all-absorbing concern—the necessity, at all costs, of avoiding the mistakes that had led to Germany's downfall in 1918.

BY 1939 these preparations—diplomatic, industrial, psychological, political and strategic—had reached the point where Hitler and his generals were convinced that under no circumstances could there be a repetition of the 1918 debacle. That specter, they felt, had finally and completely been exorcised.

The debacle of 1918 had been, it was argued, the result of a number of factors, among them (1) the necessity of waging an exhausting two-front war; (2) the failure to prepare in advance against the debilitating effects on Germany of the British blockade; (3) weakness that developed on the German home front; (4) the belatedness of the German counterblockade of Britain; (5) the excessive duration of the war, which made it possible for an unprepared America to swing the balance in favor of the Allies.

GERMANY began this war with great stocks of war necessities; with an elaborate industrial plant specially built for war purposes; with a population even more docile than usual; with an army not only very large, but also very modern and very well trained, and with an air force that was the largest and best in the world.

She was far better prepared in 1939 than she had been in 1914 to carry out a counterblockade of Britain. Above all, Hitler had played his diplomatic cards so skillfully that when hostilities broke out, the war was, for all intents and purposes, a one-front war. It remained a one-front war for three years.

Despite all the victories of 1939, 1940, 1941 and 1942, and the years of preparation that preceded these victories, the specter of 1918 is again haunting the Reich.

Hopes of that victory which Hitler so often used to tell them was just around the corner have been shattered. Failure in Russia, failure in Africa, the constant and increasingly heavy raids on German cities, have taken their toll of Germany's war capacity and weakened the morale of her people.

In the midst of this growing despair the Nazis cling to one last hope. Perhaps if Germany can hold out long enough, they say to themselves, her enemies will sooner or later become so war-weary that they will agree to a compromise peace. That is no doubt why for the past six months there has been an unceasing emphasis both in German domestic and in her foreign propaganda on Germany's defensive strength.

HERE AGAIN the specter of 1918 is beginning to plague the Germans.

After all, in 1918 Germany was not fighting a two-front war but a one-front war. Russia was knocked out early that year and forced to sign the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk. As a consequence of that development, Ludendorff was able to shift a large number of men from the Eastern to the Western Front and, thus strengthened, the German army in the west was able to launch five formidable offensives against the British, French and American forces in the spring and early summer of that year. But these offensives only exhausted the Reich and hastened the day of her doom.

The German generals remember that and are probably wondering whether an offensive on the Eastern Front this year might not, as did the Ludendorff offensives of 1918, hasten Germany collapse, rather than postpone it, bring defeat rather than victory in its train.

But if, in an attempt to learn from past experience, they decide to remain on the defensive everywhere, then they face the possibility that the Axis coalition will disintegrate, and as it does, permit Allied air power to move closer and closer to the heart of the Reich.

The choice before Hitler is decidedly unpleasant. Nemesis is catching up with the Herrenvolk. The ghost of 1918 walks again.

Car Sharing

It will always be a mystery to me why a simple practical car-sharing program has not been established in Washington and other key cities whose populations have been swollen by war industries.

Several years ago when I was in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, I observed an intelligent, simple and efficient system in operation.

It worked this way: Most of the private passenger cars operated from the suburbs into the city in the morning and back at night. Assuming the city to be at the hub of a wheel with radiating spokes leading to the suburbs, these private cars would operate in the morning with a sign placed on the windshield by the driver—size about 5 by 18 inches, indicating the point at which he expected to terminate his trip. Uusually this was in the business heart of the city. From the business center of the city trolley service and buses would provide the medium to terminate the journey if necessary.

The supplementary passenger car service in the morning and night rush hour cost the individual passenger the equivalent of 10 cents—about the same as the bus. It was understood that the passenger would pay his fare and that the driver expected to get it. This saved embarrassment for all concerned.

It seems to me that if a city of 1,750,000 Brazilians could solve their problems with a handful of vehicles and limitetd quantities of gasoline, then Washington, half the size of Rio, should be capable of utilizing a similar method to solve its problems of curtailed wartime transportation.

Such a system eliminates the complexities of getting drivers and passengers together for "car pools" at the times and places that are convenient to all. The driver follows his own schedule and the passengers buy a ride at their own discretion. This method worked in Rio. It could work in Washington.

At the present moment car pools fail because people can't get together on time in the morning and find it virtually impossible to do so at night; disintegration of these arrangements through transfers, moving to other cities, illness, etc.; drivers offering lifts to persons waiting for transportation and being refused because the person is bound elsewhere; women refusing to ride with men drivers; drivers getting disgusted and not bothering to pick up anyone any more, persons seeking transportation glaring at drivers who pass them by; embarrassment to passenger and driver when payment is offered because giving "lifts" is not yet an accepted arrangement.

Extra Coupons

There must be millions of persons who get most or all of their meals in restaurants and who therefore need few or none of their food ration coupons. The temptation is to give away one's unspent coupons to relatives and friends. This is, I am convinced, a widespread practice. Many of my acquaintances in this area send their unspent coupons to relatives back home or give them to fellow office workers or to housewives where they room. Others even hand their surplus coupons to strangers whom they encounter in groceries. Akin to these practices is that of a neighbor who had some 20 pounds of sugar left from her last year's canning allotment (illness prevented her from doing the expected amount of canning). She used the sugar to make fudge for her family and friends and never dreamed that anyone could question the propriety of so doing.

The whole idea behind food rationing is the equal sharing of scarce supplies. Equal sharing becomes a farce when a portion of the people receive windfalls in the form of extra food stamps.

It seems to me that if we accept food rationing as necessary, none of us should wish to use our ration books to do favors to relatives, friends or strangers. There is an ethical problem here which many prefer not to face.

Empty Back Seats

Congratulations on your editorial on the one-passenger gas wasters. It has been on my mind to write regarding the failure of Washingtonians to share their cars for some time.

I work in a Washington hospital as a volunteer nurses' aide for eight-hour stretches. Two and often more crowded buses pass me by as I start in the morning—drivers behind these buses see me waiting in my uniform and must know that I am not going on a pleasure trip. Why can't they share their back seat and make it easier for one who volunteers to use their feet eight hours a day.

In the rush hour coming home, I stand rather limp—waiting between streetcar and bus. Cars whiz by with only drivers—the big cars with chauffeurs are usually diplomatic cars, and I wonder if I'm not a sucker.

My husband, because of the nature of his work, is entitled to a "C" card. I could apply even for a "B" card because of my nursing. But we keep our "A" card proudly.

For somehow I think the planes, the tanks and the trucks of war need my gasoline worse than I do. These empty cars that pass me by may be the drivers' own, but sometimes I think that it's my gasoline that they're using. M. E. M.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Can You Remember?

Away back when Decoration Day meant a day in the country?

When the most important routine of the morning was to check up and see that the tank was full of gas?

When you were in a pretty bad way if you didn't have a good supply of road maps?

When a tide table was of paramount necessity?

* * * *

When dad said, "I'll drive the first 30 miles, but you'll have to drive the rest of the way?"

* * * *

When there was some advantage in owning a cottage at the shore, lake or mountains?

When mother had to keep saying, "Chidsey, you're doing 60 again; please keep down to 50 miles an hour today?"

* * * *

When nothing interfered with a holiday outing except the weather, the traffic cops or a flat tire?

* * * *

When all the roadside pumping stations were OPEN FOR BUSINESS?

* * * *

When you didn't mind driving 10 or 15 miles for a good hot dog?

* * * *

When one thing you listened to on the radio was the news about traffic conditions on the way home?

* * * *

When you got an early start so that you wouldn't encounter anything worse than traffic in two lanes?

* * * *

When the pumping station man asked, "What kind of gas?"

* * * *

When he wiped the windshield?

* * * *

When you merely had to resolve not to use more than $4 worth of gas for the trip?

* * * *

When all the highways were jammed?

* * * *

When traffic lights could ruin your holiday?

* * * *

When the common suggestion was, "Drive at 50 and I'll keep a watch for cops?"

* * * *

When "pull over to the side of the road" was part of the American language on any holiday?

* * * *

When nobody stayed home on Memorial Day?

* * * *

When you could watch the war veterans MARCH by and feel glad that you didn't have to do anything on FOOT?

* * * *

When the query at the office the day after Decoration Day was, "Did you have a nice day in the country?" instead of "How much work did you do on the home garden, George?"

Whenever we read the accounts of trouble between a prize fighter and his wife we always suspect that perhaps it was due to a failure of someone to call them both to the center of the church, just before the service, and explain the rules to them in detail.

Omitting, of course, "Now go to your corners and come out fighting."

Anybody who calls it a forgiveness tax is a bum judge of pardons.

Deliveries of ornamental shrubs and nursery stock are also barred. This probably explains the fellow we saw trying to board a bus with two evergreens, a red maple, a pair of white birches and 15 yards of boxwood.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

France And The United States

MUCH WILL depend now and in the future upon the ability of this country to judge correctly the movement in French affairs.

LIPPMANN

Unless we can do this, we shall incur the risk of becoming estranged from the vital elements of the French nation. The consequences may be very serious. They may complicate in some degree the immediate problems of the military command. They are almost certain to make much more difficult the problems of the transitional period between the ousting of the Germans and the establishment of a French government. They could produce a civil confusion in liberated France which would prove to be a formidable obstacle to reconstruction.

OUR FRENCH policy has been vitiated by the radical error of our diplomatic agents in failing to understand and therefore to report correctly to the State Department and to the White House the dominating and ascending importance of the national movement which has rallied around Gen. Charles de Gaulle. As a result we find ourselves with a French policy which is not based on the realities.

THE SITUATION cannot be corrected unless we begin by fixing it clearly in our minds that the root of the error is not that we recognized and dealt with Vichy, not that we made a deal with Darlan, but that while we were doing these necessary and expedient things, we failed to appreciate the cardinal importance of De Gaulle and the Fighting French. There has been much outright opposition to the Vichy policy and to the Darlan deal. On balance, given the fact that we had no military force available from 1940 to 1942, the case for the Vichy policy has been a very strong one.

The real point is not that we dealt temporarily with Vichy but that we did not understand, did not cultivate and genuinely support, and that after a while we became infected with personal animosity against, the leaders of the movement of French national resistance. In this there are the makings of a tragedy for France, and also for the United States.

THE FAILURE to recognize that as a matter of fact De Gaullism is the spearhead of French nationalism has led us into a whole series of misjudgments and miscalculations. Thus we were assured on supposedly high authority that General de Gaulle had only a small following in France and practically none in North Africa. Forgetting that General de Gaulle now speaks for a federation of powerful organizations inside of France, we have been told that the problem of French unity was a question of getting two proud generals to come to a personal understanding. So little did we let ourselves realize the living force of the French spirit that for a time we actually insisted that Frenchmen had the duty to fight under our command but no right to be represented in our councils.

Not realizing that the French nation has been rising again out of defeat, betrayal, and disaster, we adopted the mystical nonsense that France does not exist politically, that France must be absent, dormant, without a will or a voice of her own, until the war has been won and the prisoners have been returned, and elections have been organized and carried out.

WE HAD got ourselves into the doctrinaire position of arguing that the second largest empire in the world and an army of several hundred thousand men, should participate in the war but that nobody must presume to speak for them. Anyone who proposed to represent France as a power among the powers was regarded as interested in "politics" and not in fighting the war.

Finally, we had drifted to a point where we have been in grave danger of fostering a French political authority of our own—an authority based not upon the French nation but upon our military and economic power. This is something that cannot be done, and we shall burn our fingers badly if we do not look out.

THE STRUCTURE of illusions, based upon a misjudgment of the realities of the political life of France, has been in some measure dismantled during the past few months. All the signs indicate that the structure is now crumbling.

The question then is whether the authorities in Washington can forget the past, overcome pride of opinion, and form a French policy which restores the confidence, now seriously impaired, between France and the United States. This is as urgent as it is important. To restore confidence, we shall need in our words and our acts wisdom, humility, magnanimity, and the imaginative capacity to see ourselves as others see us. Or we shall become estranged from our oldest friend among the nations, and our indispensable ally in the world that is coming, and we shall live to regret it deeply.

Six U. S. Fliers in Parachutes Machine-Gunned by Jap Zeros

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, June 2.—The story of a Japanese attack on American airmen who parachuted from a crippled bomber was told here today in an official dispatch following an account given by the lone known survivor, Sergt. Marvin W. Beckman, Inglewood, Calif.

Beckman, only man left of six, told his story as he lay in a Calcutta hospital.

The tail of his plane was shot off during an attack by 25 Japanese Zeros as a flight of Mitchell bombers crossed the Irrawaddy River on the homeward trip after bombing objectives in Burma. The Japanese concentrated on the last plane, which was piloted by Second Lieut. T. Van Schaick of Los Angeles, the copilot.

The crew bailed out and then began a sample of what airmen call "rat warfare."

The Japanese Zeros began machine-gunning the men swinging helplessly from their parachutes. Members of the crews of other planes saw the parachutes of three men collapse while they were about 5000 feet up.

Sergeant Beckman, who already had been wounded twice before taking to his parachute, was wounded twice more by Japanese bullets as he hung in the harness. By sideslipping his parachute he managed to save his life.

The attack was on May 21. Four days later Beckman, who landed in friendly territory, reached a British outpost from which he was flown to Calcutta.

Navy to Dedicate 43-Acre Park in Norfolk Area

Norfolk, Va., June 2 (AP).—Fleet Recreation Park, equipped with facilities for the use of 10,000 enlisted men at one time, will be dedicated Saturday by the Navy. The park, where beer will be sold, is located near Benmorrell.

The park covers 43 acres, about one-third of which are wooded. Lieut. (j. g.) William Frederickson, U. S. N. R., of the Naval District Welfare and Recreation Office, is director of the recreation center.

Subsidy Plan Jogs Along

Critics Brushed Aside

Despite continued opposition from Congress and pleas of abandonment from trade groups, the Office of Price Administration plugged along on details of retail price rollbacks and subsidies for coffee and meat.

Officials said both programs would be announced soon, with coffee probably coming first.

Witnesses appearing before the Senate Agriculture Committee to protest the OPA action admitted later they had little hope of stopping the subsidies on butter, coffee and meat—but expressed confidence Congress would prohibit extension of the subsidy idea to other commodities.

Subsidy Plan Laid to Politics

Wilbur F. LaRoe, jr., general counsel for the Independent Meat Packers Association, declared the Administration embarked on the rollback program only "when John L. Lewis entered the picture."

"It was launched not for economic, but for political reasons," he said.

The meat industry stands to lose 25 million dollars on inventories "which cannot be subsidized," LaRoe declared, and the saving to the consumer "will amount to only $2.40 a year."

The dairy industry has argued the total consumer saving on meat, butter and coffee will be only $6.13 a year and that there is no reason to think the rollback will be any more effective than price ceilings in keeping prices down.

Homer R. Davison, vice president of the American Meat Institute, said the subsidy to compensate processors for the price rollback would "add millions to the public debt" and discourage production rather than promote it.

Present Regulations Backed

G. W. Birrell, treasurer of the National Packers Association, told the committee proper enforcement and equalization of present price regulations would save consumers many times the amount of the meat subsidy, which he estimated would cost more than 300 million dollars a year.

Meantime Chairman Steagall of the House Banking and Currency Committee said he would seek to get a vote as soon as possibly on the legislation extending the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corp. by 500 million dollars.

The measure carries an amendment specifying that none of the corporation's funds may be used as subsidies to maintain maximum prices on agricultural products, and also an authorization giving the War Food Administrator power to modify maximum prices on any agricultural commodity if he finds it necessary to "secure an adequate production of such commodity for war purposes."

Canners Condemn OPA, Say Grade Labeling Radical

By the Associated Press

Spokesmen for the canning industry told a congressional committee yesterday that OPA regulations affecting their operations had been drafted without consulting them and had proved unfair and unworkable.

Appearing before the Smith committee investigating charges that executive agencies have exceeded congressional grants of power, Harold K. Bachelder, president of the Ladoga Canning Co. of Indianapolis, said the regulations were not drawn "by practical men."

He criticized in particular an order requiring the grading of canned goods on the labels, subsequently amended to require only the designation of the grade in invoices, saying it necessitated "a very grave and radical change in the business methods of the canners."

Action Due Today On Job Probe Bill

Legislation to broaden the list of Government jobs whose holders would have to be confirmed by the Senate is slated for Senate action today, with Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, its original author leading the fight for passage.

A battle is ahead with several members prepared to sponsor changes and others planning to fight the entire proposal but leaders generally believed it would be approved. In general the bill would subject Federal jobholders getting $4500 or more a year to Senate review.

Rival National Party Leaders Exchange Greetings at Capital

In utter cordiality, the rival leaders of the two great political parties met, shook hands, and smiled at each other here yesterday.

Frank Walker, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, smiled down to Harrison Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and said "I'm glad to meet you, indeed."

"It's a great pleasure for me," replied Spangler. It was their first meeting. It occurred in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building where Spangler and Walker were the star witnesses at opening of hearing on a bill by Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, to standardize Federal polling hours throughout the Nation at 6 a. m. to 9 p. m.

So cordial was the atmosphere that both Spangler and Walker joined with Lucas in urging adoption of the bill, and both took the same line in urging legislation to give members of America's armed services abroad full opportunity to vote in the next election, along with those stationed in this country.

But on the crucial question of whose gang could like whose gang in 1944's fight for the White House and for control of America's Government, the party leaders were strictly noncommittal, though undiscouraged.

After they had plenty of time to size each other up, the question was fired at each in turn.

"I'm hopeful" said Walker, and let go a couple of "ha-has."

Stubborn Foe Lost 1500 Dead In Attu Action

The stubborn and suicidal character of Japanese last-ditch resistance was strikingly illustrated by the Navy yesterday in a report that at least 1500 Japs were killed and only four captured in the fighting on Attu Island through midnight May 30.

The enemy death on the Aleutian Island is expected to mount considerably when a final total is made, for mopping up operations continues against isolated pockets of resistance, and the 1500 toll reported is incomplete.

While the Navy communique listed 1500 dead as an "estimate," a naval spokesman said this represented an actual count of bodies—which, however, may contain slight errors. Many other Nipponese are believed to have been buried under the snow by their comrades and not counted.

American casualties, on basis of figures announced a week ago by Secretary of War Stimson, are much lighter than those of the Japs. Stimson said last Thursday that United States forces had lost 127 men killed, 399 wounded and 118 missing. This was for a shorter period than that reported yesterday for the Japs, but authorities said that our losses should continue about the same level as before.

Yesterday's Navy communique also reported attacks by American Army planes Monday on the Jap base on Kiska Island. Formations of Liberator and Mitchell bombers and Warhawk fighters bombed and strafed the airfield runway, Kiska Bay shore batteries and installations at Gertrude Cove.

List of 287 Africa Wounded Includes Md., Va. Soldiers

Several Maryland and Virginia men were among 287 United States soldiers wounded in action in the North African area, the War Department reported yesterday.

Maryland men listed as wounded were: Pvt. First Class John F. Langenstein of Hagerstown, Pvt. First Class Joseph D. Lingg of Emmitsburg, Pvt. William P. Mitchell of Havre de Grace, Pvt. First Class Walter B. Peeples of Joppa, Pvt. James A. Pilkerton of Mechanicsville, Pvt. Leonard Resnick of Baltimore and Pvt. Clarence E. Ross of Baltimore.

Maryland to Get More Bahaman Farm Workers

Philadelphia, June 2 (AP).—J. H. Wood, regional director of the Farm Security Administration, announced today that 300 more farm laborers from the Bahamas would arrive in Maryland this week to help Eastern Shore farmers with their crops.

The first group—100 strong—will arrive in Salisbury tomorrow from Florida, and the others will arrive in Pocomoke City on Friday, Wood said.

Surprise Ending

'Odd Object' Turns Out Land Mine

Holtz Bay, Attu Island, May 24 (Delayed).—It was an odd looking canvas case, with an even odder brass hexagon inside about two inches thick, about six inches across.

The lieutenant was curious after finding it in a gun position. He carefully cut off the cover, carefully pried off the brass. Inside he found a queer collection of odd shaped blocks which looked like wood but seemed to serve no purpose the lieutenant could figure out, so he shaved the corner from one, smelled it and finally laid it down on a table. The material wasn't wood, he knew, but he didn't know yet what the contraption was Neither did I, and I was the fellow watching him experiment. That was several days ago.

Today I saw a similar object. Intelligence officers had it and were dipping it carefully in a pool of water, handling it with extreme caution.

"What," I inquired casually, "is it."

The officer handling it looked up, smiled sweetly, and said:

"Land mine."

Russia, Britain Got Only 1% of Beef, Veal, Report Shows

About 1 out of every 100 pounds of beef and veal available in this country has been exported to the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom during the four months which ended on April 30, Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., reported yesterday.

Lend-lease exports of beef and veal in 1942, comparatively, amounted to two-tenths of a pound out of every 100 pounds available, Stettinius said. Of lamb and mutton, lend-lease exported about 15 pounds out of every 100 pounds this year as compared with two-fifths of a pound out of every 100 pounds last year.

Pork shipments were 13 pounds out of every 100 pounds of our supply as compared to last year when the rate was about 10 pounds out of every 100.

Rome Radio Quotes Plea by Pope on Bombings

By the Associated Press

Pope Pius XII was quoted by the Rome radio yesterday as exhorting the belligerents "to respect the laws of humanity in the aerial war."

The broadcast said the Pope made his remarks in an address to the 19 cardinals present in Rome on the occasion of his name day, the anniversary of the death of St. Eugene. The Pope's name is Eugenio Pacelli. The only account of his speech at once available was that which was broadcast by the Axis source.

The Pope said he was speaking "at the moment when there are ripening the bitter fruit of false theories, old and new."

These were the passages that were quoted regarding bombings:

"It is painful and deplorable to see that often during this war one sees a moral judgment rendered on certain actions which are in disaccord with right and with the laws of humanity simply because the one responsible belongs to one or the other of the parties in conflict, without taking account as to whether these actions are or are not in conformity with the dictates of the eternal judge.

"On the other hand, the progressive applications of the means of strife which make no distinction between military and nonmilitary objectives, and the ever-increasing violence of war, draw attention to the dangers inherent in the sad and inexorable relation between action and reprisals to the detriment not only of peoples and individuals but of the whole community of nations."

The radio then quoted the Pope as making this appeal: "We, who since the beginning of the conflict have done all that was in our power to induce the belligerents to respect the laws of humanity in the aerial war, now believe it to be our duty to exhort them once more to observe these laws. . . .

"Every word addressed by us to the competent authorities and every allusion made by us in public should be seriously considered in the interest of the victims so as not to render their situation—even unintentionally—more serious and more insupportable."

In a passage regarding Poland, the radio quoted the pontiff as saying:

"To this people (the Poles) so cruelly tried and to other peoples who with Poland have been obliged to drink the cup of bitterness of this war, there should be reserved a future that fulfills their legitimate aspirations and which should be in accordance with the greatness of their sacrifices, in a Europe rebuilt on a Christian basis and within a group of States free from the errors and mistakes of the past."

Lord Halifax 'Deplores' Delays of Labor Strife

Portland, Me., June 2 (AP).—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, said today that while "it is not our business to express opinions on (American) labor disputes, naturally we deplore anything that holds up the war effort just as you and your Government would deplore anything we did in England to retard war progress."

The comment of the envoy, here for a visit, was in response to a question in an interview.

Theater Guild Protects Its Regular Subscribers

This Season's Deficit to Be Made Up Next; Casting Progresses for 'It's Up to You;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

FOR THE BENEFIT of the considerable number who have written or phoned to inquire as to the status of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society's uncompleted season of six subscription plays at the National Theater, we are happy to pass along latest word from Guild headquarters to those whom it may not have reached.

SIDNEY KINGSLEY

Along with the earnest of Sidney Kingsley's Critics' Circle Prize play of "The Patriots" and "Uncle Harry," costarring Eva LeGallienne and Joseph Schildkraut, for next season, the Theater Guild-American Theater Society executives observe: "Unfortunately, this winter a series of misadventures over which we had no control, have interfered with our program . . . Due to our inability at this time to provide two more suitable plays, we are postponing the balance of the season until autumn."

Provision for this deficit, as we understand it, is being made in the method of renewal of subscriptions by T. G.-A. T. S. members in good standing. The new applications for renewal will be based upon the amount by which present membership must be supplemented to cover SIX PLAYS for the season of 1943-44.

Under this proposed arrangement, the outlay of the individual subscriber will be considerably less than last spring. The Guild goes on to say, however, that "if some other adjustment seems desirable to you, we will cheerfully comply."

So there it is, straight from the feedbox, as you might say.

Yesterday's sweltering visitor to the steamroom exhilaration of the dripping drama department was Ernest Bachrach, one of Hollywood's foremost portrait photographers, on a junket to the East in the interest of improved studio art for the newspapers and magazines. Having already interviewed some 60 dramatic and art editors, with nine cities still to go, Mr. Bachrach was bogged down with more notes than we usually carry at the bank. Most of them seemed to make sense. If Mr. Bachrach is still of that opinion by the time he reaches his home lot at RKO-Radio, the "revolution" will be on. From the standpoint of economy and efficiency it will be all to the good for those in the studio as well as on the drama desks. You may not notice much difference in the paper, but we will, in the lessened pressure on the wastebasket. Mr. Bachrach, incidentally, peeled of his oppressive outer garments, is an amiable young man who, at least, will have the satisfaction of an "I told you so" when he gets back home.

The Business Is Taking Shape

The cast of "It's Up to You," the Washington Workshop's living-newspaper-musical, has been augmented by five additional players, on the word of Director Pvt. Maurice Hanson.

Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Dean, who will play the roles of Wilbur and Henrietta, a typical American couple. They reside at 2432 Fourth Street Northeast. He is employed in the Labor Department, she in the War Department.

Louis A. L. Mintz, WPB analyst and reviewer, will play the role of the grocer, who takes care of his regular customers. He has had experience on the New York stage.

Edith Brusiloff Sperling, well-known Washington stage and radio actress, a secretary in the Food Distribution Administration of the Department of Agriculture, will assume various important roles in the "food show"—among them a Greek woman, a Russian woman and, most important of all, the Conscience of the Hoarder, Mrs. Gibbs. The role of Mrs. Gibbs will be taken by Beatrice Plumer, War Production Drive Headquarters, formerly associated with Jean Rosenthal's Theater Production Service in New York.

"It's Up to You," already having been given a successful professional preview here, will be coming along for a run later this month. It's a good show.

Next Monday night, beginning at 8 by the clock, the Washington Variety Club is heaving one of its more luminous levees in honor of Fred Rohrs, formerly of United Artists Pictures and newly appointed to the Southern division managership of Producers Releasing Corporation Pictures. The congratulatory goings-on, to which Mr. Rohr's high spirit of camaraderie amply entitles him, will be of a duration limited only by the fortitude and physical stamina of those turning out to do him honor.

It seems we missed something. From the frequency and enthusiasm with which we are being chided about our seeming laxity, it can only be gathered that last Sunday night's performance of "This Is the Whacks," for the benefit of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society of Denver, Colo., a nonsectarian institution engaged in a splendid work, was one of the "events of the season." With the Shoreham's Barnee-Lowe Orchestra providing the instrumental background, the cast, both headed and directed by Edith Pear and Sylvia Tobias, is reported to have given Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" a terrific stretch run. Perhaps it could be repeated?

Monogram Moving Up

Hollywood, Calif., June 2.—We're looking for a wide expansion of Monogram films, now that George Burroughs, former vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, has resigned to go with Monogram. He must feel it's a great opportunity or he would not have made the switch. The company's credit has been increased from $200,000 to a million. Mae West has all but signed with Monogram, which is angling for many more stars . . . Incidentally, Mae spent two weeks at a Hollywood hospital and had a minor operation, without any one finding out she was a patient. She went in as Janice Mast, came out Mae West . . . Walter Colmes, my ex-helper and man about town, has signed with PRC to produce "Trocadero," an all-star musical with two name bands and a hunk of stars. His procedure will kill you, and if I know Walter—and I should—he'll turn out a darned good picture.

MAE WEST

Nice Girl, Too

Ann Miller's lost again. This is the third time George Abbott has sent for her. He wants her for "The Umpire's Daughter." She missed out on "My Pal Joey" and "Best Foot Forward," but she has a contract with Harry Cohn, and goes into "Tropicana" with Gaxton and Moore. After that she gets the lead in "Jam Session" . . . Columbia's B. B. Kahane's daughter, Shirley Lois announced her engagement to Charles Paul Bonoff. He's a southern California medical student.

Nick of Time

John Tyers, whose voice is getting rounds of applause nightly in "The Gypsy Baron," was just about to be let go by Metro when one of the higher-ups caught the show and signed him to a new contract . . . Louise Allbritton's head will be turned into marble by Sculptor Yucca Salamunich. He's done the same service for President Roosevelt . . . Yes, Shirley Temple's grown up. She paid $100 for a wrist watch for her boy friend . . . Louis K. Sidney, after signing Phil Spitalny and his girl band for a Metro musical, rubbed his hands and said, "Isn't it wonderful? Thirty-five gals with metal gadgets in their hands, and not one of them welding or riveting!"

It Worked

George Marshall had an amusing note from an actor who had inserted his head into a picture of a ham and added at the end of the note: "What can I lose by writing you? I need a job and your'e elected." And I'll be darned if Donald Miller isn't now working for George Marshall . . . Rita Quigley, who's played opposite Mickey Rooney, said to me the other night that she'd only marry a man who had seen combat service. Well, she's certainly had a lot of bids, 'cause she and her mother feed six Army pilots every Saturday night . . . Paramount picked up its option on Dick Powell . . . Lois Andrews' friends are trying to read the inscription Jess Barker put on the inside of that costly wrist watch he clamped her with.

Charlie Foy, who impersonates his old man in "The Gunmaster," does the finger dance which Eddie originated 50 years ago.

Make-up Lacking But Ann Scores

Hollywood.—When her telephone didn't work recently at her Encino home, Ann Sheridan promptly notified the telephone company. In due course a repair man arrived.

He quite evidently didn't recognize the star of "Edge of Darkness" as he worked blithely away at his task, but chattered cheerfully away about mundane things.

Miss Sheridan, fresh from a spot of toil in her victory garden, sans makeup, sans hairdress and sans glamour, watched interestedly and apologized for her appearance.

"Don't worry about it a minute, miss," said the repair man. "I've fixed telephones for some of these here film stars—and you ought to see some of them without their fancy business on!"

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, June 2.

Commander Jack Dempsey, whose divorce suit against Hannah Williams has been in the courts these past days, never wanted her to return to the stage. Once, when Ed Wynn had a role for her, Hannah told Jack: "I don't want you to be angry, but I think I have a job in Ed Wynn's new show, and the script calls for me to kiss a young man onstage" . . . "That's okay," Dempsey agreed, "but at every one of those kissing performances, I'll sit in the front row with another girl—and kiss her. Do you mind?" . . . Hannah reluctantly told Wynn the deal was off.

KATHARINE CORNELL

Serrt. Sidney Kingsley sat with Katharine Cornell, who hinted that she would be interested in doing a modern play. Kingsley hinted that some day he'd like to write one for her. "And then I'd tour with it, throughout the hemisphere," said Miss Cornell dreamily . . . "And I'd phone you in South America, and ask you how much my royalties are," said Kingsley, just as dreamily . . . "And I'd tell you 10,000 pesos," sighed Miss Cornell softly . . . "How much would that represent?" sighed Kingsley in the same mood . . . "Your royalties of 5 per cent on the gross," said Miss Cornell less dreamily . . . "In that case," snapped the come-to-earth playwright, who rates higher percentages, "the deal is off."

Jimmy Durante took his aged uncle to a revival of the Eugene O'Neill movie, "Strange Interlude," which starred Norma Shearer. The elder Durante complained later: "Bad pitcha. No girls, and allatime talk, talk, talk" . . . Rex Stout, the creator of the fiction detective, Nero Wolfe, still is being plagued by friends who call him after midnight and ask: "What's become of Presidential-candidate Lemke?"

John Golden, the producer, was in Gertrude Lawrence's dressing room when she was asked by an interviewer: "In your stage roles, Miss Lawrence, do you prefer doing comedy or tragedy?" . . . "Let me answer that," Golden interrupted. "An onion will make any person cry. But as yet they haven't invented a vegetable to make a person laugh."

The director of a radio network cabled Noel Coward about writing a series of broadcasts for a New York actress. Coward's reply was brief: "I'd rather cut my throat" . . . A news-cameraman came upon Arturo Toscanini, early in the morning, and started to photograph him. When the pictures were taken, Toscanini asked: "Now are you happy?" The photographer nodded. Toscanini said: "Now go—you beast" . . . Joe Frisco, now at the 18 Club, is proudly announcing that at last he has a maid. "But how did you manage to find one to work for you?" Frisco was asked . . . "I made her an unusual offer," Frisco explained, "$12 a week—and all she can steal."

Arthur Richman, the playwright, tried to use his cigarette lighter in vain. His companion finally offered him a match, and Richman lit his cigarette with it. "It's marvelous what progress civilization has made," said the playwright, puffing away. "Here is a gold contraption which makes callouses on your thumb, spills gasoline in your pockets, ruins your digestion because you get angry when it doesn't work and then along comes a smart man who invents a little wooden thing called a match, which, when struck, gives you a light."

Last month all the papers published a picture showing the King of England laughing. That picture was taken in a London theater, while Leslie Banks was onstage . . . Banks is the actor who once told his wife about an offer he had received from Jane Cowl, to appear with her in repertory. "Miss Cowl said," Banks reported, "that 'one day I may play Lady Macbeth, and the next day I may even walk on carrying a tray'" . . . Mrs. Banks was suspicious of the offer. "If Cowl walks on with a tray," she told her husband, "you may be sure that John the Baptist's head will have to be on it."

A new producer in Hollywood lunched at the studio with some executives. They asked him if he had any immediate plans for a sure-fire film. "Yes. We'll get Cole Porter to write the songs," he replied, "Ben Hecht to write the scenario, a $6,000-a-week director to direct it, and Gary Cooper, Mickey Rooney, Garbo and Lana Turner to appear in it. Then, boys," said the producer, rubbing his hands, "we're off to a helluva start."

Women CAN take it!

KATHERINE SMITH

Drama Critic of the Times-Herald, says:

"It's been done. M. G. M. has made 'BATAAN' with a kind of simple dignity and dramatic significance. Perhaps you don't like war movies. But if you deliberately stay away from 'BATAAN' because it is a war action picture, you are as good as admitting you can't face war itself."

Woman to woman, we don't like war itself, but we are awake to LIFE today and we know WOMEN CAN TAKE IT!

Jessel Signed to Do Filmusicals

Hollywood, June 2 (INS).—Through an age-old reliable underground route in New York comes a message that Joseph Schenck has signed George Jessel as associate producer of musicals. George has been trying to land the right spot in Hollywood for a long time. With his book on the market and his Broadway success, a Twentieth Century-Fox contract is undoubtedly just what he has been seeking. Also from New York comes word Joe put the name of John Harvey, romantic lead in "Kiss and Tell," on a long-term deal.

ANN SHERIDAN

Joe gets here Thursday. He has been in New York for the last few days. Ronald Graham, one of the leads in "By Jupiter" is also coming to Hollywood from New York to play the role he created on the stage, in the movie of the same name.

Mary Dowell, "Strutting Sam" to her friends, arrived in Hollywood in time for Memorial Day. She starts work at Warners tomorrow on her own musical, "Here Come the Girls." She'll have Jerry Wald as her mentor, for he is the producer. The four chorus ladies who are to enliven Stuttering Sam's musical are Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Alexis Smith and last, but by no means least, Jane Wyman. The girls, as I take it, are decorative but not great singers and dancers. It's a comedy of "show business," which is always good entertainment.

Her name is Peggy O'Neill. She is 19, red-haired and pretty as they come. Yes, you have guessed it. Peggy is Hollywood's newest Cinderella. She came to Hollywood from San Francisco in search of a movie job. Fortified with experience on the radio and in community theaters, Peggy called on Agent Leon Lance who took her to see Charles R. Rogers, veteran producer. Charlie took one look at her, ordered a test, signed her up and her first movie is "Peggy O'Neill," named in her honor. Charlie had the story up his sleeve waiting for a title—and this is it.

Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, authors of "Life With Father", are spending some of their earnings from this hit play in Hollywood. I talked with Russel and he told me every company had offered them money for their play but no deal had been made. I asked if it were true the price had now been upped to $500,000 and he laughed and said: "Perhaps Oscar Serlin would know." Russel's wife, Alison Smith, passed away in January. Lindsay's wife, actress Dorothy Stickney, is expected here this week. Maybe it's a movie deal for her.

Chatter in Hollywood: with the Richard Arlen-Virginia Grey romance definitely on ice, Dick is being seen everywhere with Margaret Kinsella. Don't ask who the lady is because I wouldn't be knowing—other than that she is attractive and nonprofessional. Dick and his wife, Jobyna Arlen have been legally separated for years and a property settlement was made—but she has never filed for divorce.

"Lady in Distress" Gives the Little Another Hit

By Marjorie Kelly

It may be unpatriotic to say it right out in print, but the British film "Lady in Distress" is a more exciting, more melodramatic melodrama than any Hollywood effort we've seen in months. The British seem to do this sort of thing superlatively well, both on stage and screen, as a long series, including "Ladies in Retirement," "The Lady Vanishes," "The Woman Alone" and many another such bears witness.

"Lady in Distress," which opened at the Little yesterday for its first Washington showing, is sheer entertainment—thoughtful, intelligent high comedy. It has nothing to say about this or any war. In fact, though very recently made, it ignores the war to the point of centering its plot in an employment problem of the sort that just doesn't exist now.

Peter and Pat, a young couple living in London, are unable to see each other for more than a few minutes each day and on Sunday afternoon because Peter works daytimes and Pat at night. Pat is unable to find a day job, although she is afraid their marriage will break up if she doesn't manage to see Peter a little oftener.

That is the set-up when one morning Peter, on his way to work, is electrified to see a man stabbing a girl in an apartment house window.

Nothing to "Give Away"

What happens from there on we have no intention of hinting, further than to say that the many hairpin turns of the plot revolve about the would be murder Peter had seen and his fantastic jealousy of his wife. So ingenious a plot ought not to be given away in advance, and you can take our word for it that unless somebody tells you how it's going to come out, you'll never guess until the final two minutes.

One of the most agreeable qualities of "The Lady in Distress" is that the people portrayed are ordinary, average people, and no attempt is made to explain why a crane-driver is made the hero. There is no comment on the quaintness, or the earthiness, or any of the other qualities of people who work with hands, that are usually pointed up out of all proportion. Peter is just a thoroughly right guy, intelligent, sensitive, making his living just as you or I, only he happens to do it driving a crane. And nobody makes anything of it.

A De Luxe Cast

Two of the stars of "The Lady Vanishes" have leading roles in the present film: Michael Redgrave, who after making this picture entered the British navy, and Paul Lukas, whose role of the magician adds one more brilliant performance to a list of many.

The feminine lead is Sally Gray, a very pretty young woman who has, since making this picture, been imported by Hollywood. She looks rather like Joan Bennett, and has some of the same softly appealing charm.

Ace Documentary Added

The other half of the current bill is the OWI's documentary, "Prelude to War." This is an anthology of newsreels, bound together by means of Walter Huston's commentary into a coherent interpretation of the events which led up to our declaration of war. Some of the most unforgettable newsreels ever made are in this compilation—for instance, a strip showing a dead Chinese child, naked and grublike, its body already bloated, lying in a ruined street; and others of the rape of Manchuria—which no one who has seen them will ever forget.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

It will probably be denied, but the inside fact is that United States Ambassador Bill Phillips came back from India with a blunt, in spots bitter, report against the British.

He felt that the United States should do something about the festering Indian political situation, that the Indian army and people could not be a force in the war until the question was cleaned up. Also, he was straight-from-the-shoulder in his criticism of Field Marshal Wavell, whom he feels is not suited for the job and should be removed.

Phillips not only gave this report to the President, but he also had a conference with Prime Minister Churchill last week.

Ambassador Phillips' report is most significant, because he has been pro-British, served as Minister to Canada, has been a consistent believer that our policy must go hand-in-hand with the British. Phillips is mild, not addicted to crusading, but a thorough, conscientious diplomat, reporting what he believes to be the facts.

Among other things, Phillips reported that mediation between different Indian factions and the British government was possible now; also desirable. He feels that if some such move is not undertaken now, he should not go back to India, nor should any other United States Ambassador, since the presence of an American envoy would be taken as the stamp of United States approval for British policy.

What the President said to Churchill on the Indian problem is his secret. But it is known that Roosevelt has hoped for a year that the British would do something about India. However, he also feels very strongly that the United States should not interfere in Britain's colonial problems.

Meanwhile, the British, with an army large enough to handle any problem inside India, seem content merely to sit on the lid—despite American pleas that the Burma Road must be reopened and despite the fact that Indian troops will not fight the Japs whole-heartedly unless they have a small investment in the Four Freedoms for which they are supposed to fight.

White House—Black Market

The White House is having its troubles with the black market. The White House architect called up the Georgetown Electric Co. recently to buy No. 12 copper wire for rewiring a part of the Executive Mansion. But there was no copper wire to be had.

"Where can we get it?" the architect asked.

"Baltimore, on the black market—only it will cost you 20 cents a foot instead of 7 cents."

"Well, we can't have anything to do with the black market," was the White House reply, and the architect went shopping elsewhere.

Note: Later the White House called up Weaver's hardware store to buy some gold paint. "What do you want it for," joked Tom Weaver, "to gild the throne?"

Woman Watches Army Cooks

Miss Mary I. Barber, Washington's first dollar-a-year woman, has now begun to bring long-needed thrift to Army mess kitchens. If Miss Barber has her way, the Army's 250,000 cooks will be persuaded to make soup out of the left-overs and cut down the quota for the garbage pails.

In fact, her save-left-overs idea has already gone so far that certain pig farmers near Army camps are complaining that they don't get enough garbage these days.

Miss Barber was borrowed by the Quartermaster Corps from the Kellogg Co. at Battle Creek to teach tough mess sergeants, among other things, that a camp menu does not have to be arranged one week in advance, and stuck to religiously. If, for instance, a camp mess has several hundred chickens left over from Sunday dinner, they can be used on Monday, not thrown into the garbage pail.

Unfortunately, a lot of mess sergeants had been doing that, partly because the menu for Monday was already arranged. Also it is against the law for the Army to sell food, nor can it be given away. It must be thrown away. This has been done in the past via garbage trucks to the highest bidding hog dealers.

Now, however, Miss Barber is helping to arrange master menus, which though they specify soup, do not name the variety. This gives the cook an option to make soup out of whatever his left-overs permit.

This all sounds simple to the average housewife but, believe it or not, it has not always been done by the Army.

Another trick is to save all dripping fats from bacon or sausage and use them in a cream sauce for cauliflower or other vegetables.

Under Miss Barber's regime, if a soldier sees lamb on the Wednesday noon menu he will probably see lamb broth (left-over meat plus barley) on the Thursday bill-of-fare.

However, Army cooks must always follow the rule imposed by the Surgeon General that no foods may be used more than 26 hours after cooking.

Indian Merry-Go-Round

Imprisoned Mahatma Gandhi has asked the Viceroy for permission to communicate with the Mohammedan leader in an effort to effect Indian unity, but the Viceroy has refused . . . Raj Gopal Chariar, another important Indian leader, has asked the Viceroy for permission to see Gandhi in order to compose Indian differences. Again the Viceroy has refused . . . Suspicion is that the British don't want Indian differences composed . . . The India League, which has considerable influence in the United States, has secured the support of distinguished Americans in urging that the time for mediation in India is now. Among those who advocate this are Pearl Buck, Clare Boothe Luce, Herbert Bayard Swope, Henry I. Harriman, Alf Landon, Dr. Mary E. Wooley . . . The India League emphasizes the point that to help China, the Burma Road is essential. And to open the Burma Road the fighting spirit of the Indian army is necessary—fighting for the Four Freedoms . . . To understand Churchill's obstinacy on India, take a look at his early background. A large part of it was spent fighting wars for the empire—fought in the Spanish army against the freedom of Cuba, attached to Thirty-first Punjab Infantry, served with Tirah Expeditionary Force, with Twenty-first Lancers in Nile Expeditionary Force participating in Battle of Khartoum, officer in South African Light Horse Cavalry, participated in most of Boer War battles.

Floyd B. Odlum Made R. K. O. Chairman

By the Associated Press

New York, June 2.—Floyd B. Odlum, Wall Street financier, today was named chairman of the board of the 70-million-dollar RKO Corp., shortly after being elected to the board at the company's annual meeting of stockholders at Dover, Del.

The board's regorganization meeting was held in the New York offices of the motion picture producing, distributing and theater firm, and Odlum's elevation to the head of the company confirmed earlier reports that he was to assume active direction of the company.

As early as January, Odlum's Atlas Corp., an investment firm listed as dealing in "special situations," was reported to be holding 44 per cent of the preferred stock and 46 per cent of the common stock of RKO since that time the Radio Corporation of America and Rockfeller Center, Inc., sold large RKO holdings to Dillon, Read & Co., which subsequently resold the stock to unnamed buyers.

The Atlas Corp. sponsored a reorganization plan and underwrote 500,000 shares of common stock at $3 per share following a court order of December 20, 1939.

Odlum succeeds Richard C. Patterson, who was named vice chairman of the RKO Board.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Managers' Group Elects

Thomas R. Crowley has been elected president of the Managers' Section of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, it was announced yesterday. Clarence Carr was elected secretary-treasurer of the section.

Mr. Carr, general agent of the Penn Mutual office here, succeeds George A. Hatzes as section manager; Mr. Carr, local manager of the Bankers Life office, succeeds Joseph A. Barbeau.

Reliable Stores' Dividends

Directors of Reliable Stores Corporation have declared quarterly dividends as follows: 37½ cents a share on preferred stock and 12½ cents a share on common stock. Both are payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 18.

At the same time the corporation's board noted that an overprovision of $400,000 for Federal taxes provided out of 1942 profits will be retained as a reserve for future taxes. The corporation operates retail furniture outlets in Washington and other cities.

Mail Revenues Continue Rise

Washington postal receipts in May totaled $1,100,917, a gain of $184,588 over the same month last year. This was a new all-time record for the City Postoffice. Revenues for the first five months totaled $5,381,942, an increase of $820,922 over the same period last year and also a record for that period.

750,000-Ton Increase In Peanut Crop Seen

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Production of two million tons of peanuts for market this year is "entirely possible," Roy E. Parrish, executive vice president of the Georgia Peanut Co., said here today. The figure would represent an increase of 750,000 tons over 1942, he said.

Nats Swamp Indians, 13-1, Under Lights, In Virtual Tie as Yanks Lose to Chisox, 2-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That wasn't exactly a startling statement by Comdr. Gene Tunney the other day when he went on record with the observation that the next heavyweight champion would come out of the armed forces. As the horse players would say, Tunney is playing the chalk.

POVICH

Tunney isn't taking much of a gamble with his prediction inasmuch as the preponderance of physically-fit American males of fighting age are already in uniform. As long as he brought up the topic, though, I felt compelled to talk to another authority. I upped and telephoned Col. Harvey L. Miller of the Marines, at his Portsmouth, Va., station.

Colonel Miller, who was the lightweight champion of the Pacific Fleet in his youth and is now on leave from the presidency of the National Boxing Association, agrees heartily with Tunney that the next heavyweight champ will come out of the fighting forces. "How could it be otherwise?" he asks.

It has pleased Miller no end that the armed services have recognized boxing as the basis of all training for hand-to-hand combat. He has been plumping for prize-fight tactics in the service for years. "Even when our boys on Guadalcanal admitted they were scared stiff when the Japs jumped them in the jungle, their American boxing training taught them to side-step the Japs' rush and let 'em have it with a right hand to the chin or belly, and then rip 'em open with a bayonet," he says.

Miller isn't too fascinated either by the Judo training the United States forces have been getting. "This business of copying the Japs and meeting a Jap's charge by grabbing his fist and doubling it back in the form of a Z while you back-hand him across the jugular vein is just going to a lot of extra trouble. You can get the same effect and even better, by side-stepping and letting the Jap have a straight right cross to the neck or chin."

As a result of the boxing training in the Army and Navy, the new crop of postwar fighters will be counter-punchers, Miller declares. "They're being taught to let the enemy make the first charge, and then strike back—hard. Joe Louis, Barney Ross, Gene Tunney, yes, and even Dempsey were counter punchers. They used their opponents' own forward weight to help them get power into their punches."

That was a novel description of Dempsey, usually pictured as a rip-snorting killer who liked to charge his man, but Miller holds out for his label of Dempsey as a counter-puncher. "He was willing to take plenty of punches to get inside. He'd throw his right hand and then, shift, and when his opponent tried to move in Dempsey would nail him with that left. Dempsey had that crab-like shuffle, you know."

Ruby Robert Fitzsimmons was strictly a counter-fighter, but only by accident, Miller points out. "Where did Fitz get that solar plexus punch? It happened the night he fought Corbett, when he missed with a right, and saw Corbett open for a left to the body. Fitz let a left hand fly to a spot just above the abdomen and knocked Corbett out with it. That's how the solar plexus was born."

The age of the next champion is difficult to predict, Miller says. "You'd have to be drawing the picture pretty fine to say how old the next heavyweight champion will be. Fitzsimmons didn't put on a glove until he was 29. Neither did Johnny Buff, the old flyweight champion. On the other hand, Ad Wolgast, a great champion, was washed up at 22. There's no way to fix the age at which a fighter is best. It's too individual."

Miller says he isn't counting Joe Louis out of it either. "If the war gets over in a couple of years, Louis may still be the best of the crop. I admit, the training he is getting in the Army now doesn't compare to the highly specialized kind he'd get from handlers in a fight camp, but it will keep Joe more physically fit than the civilians will be. It all depends how fight-rusty he gets, and how his reflexes respond."

The great crop of men who come out of the war bent on fistic careers will have to unlearn much that Army training has taught them, says Heinie. "If they didn't, we'd have the biggest surge of foul-fighting you ever saw. Nothing is barred in the program we're now teaching. We teach them to hit below the belt, kick, gouge and do anything that will incapacitate an enemy. The postwar fighters will have to learn the Marquis of Queensberry rules all over again, or any respectable referee would throw them out of the ring."

Miller is willing to make one prediction. He doesn't think that the new heavyweight champion will come out of the Army unless it's Louis himself. "The Navy and Marines have a much better record for producing champions despite the fact their enrollments have been nothing to compare with the Army. The Navy has produced five champs, Ken Overlin, Jack Sharkey, Johnny Buff, Babe Risko and Young Dencio. The Marines have produced two, Gene Tunney and George LaBlanche. That LaBlanche is the fellow who knocked out Nonpareil Jack Dempsey in the '80's, incidentally.

"The only champion the Army ever produced was Lew Jenkins and he couldn't hold the lightweight title six months."

Milo Candini Holds Tribe To Eight Hits

Griffs Unloose 17-Hit Barrage As Every Player Drives In Tally

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The night was hot, and so were the Nats at Griffith Stadium last evening. As for the humility—that belonged to the Cleveland Indians, who took a 13-to-1 beating from the upsurging Washingtonians.

The Nats put the slug on the Indians with 17 hits, against four pitchers, batted out a seven-run eighth inning and lifted themselves into a virtual tie with the Yankees for the league lead. The Yanks remain on top on a percentage point basis.

All of the Nats' 17 swats couldn't overshadow the pitching job turned in by Milo Candini for the 14,222 customers in Club Griffith. Moved into a starting role for the first time this season after impressive appearances as a relief pitcher, Candini was slightly wonderful.

He gave up a run to the Indians in the first inning, and that was all. Candini draped zeros around the necks of the Tribesmen thereafter, weathered a flurry of trouble in both the fifth and sixth innings, and completed an eight-hit pitching job. He walked one batter.

Every man among the Nats collected at least one of the plentiful hits with the exception of Mickey Vernon, who is mired in a batting slump that is setting some kind of a record. And every man on the Nats, including Vernon, drove in at least one run.

Jake Early fattened his average with four straight hits, Bob Johnson collected a single, double and triple for himself. Candini himself contributed two hits to the proceedings.

The first Cleveland pitcher was Jack Salveson, and the Nats discovered he hasn't changed much despite the record of two victories and no defeats he carried into the game. Salveson, who was discharged by the Nats in 1937 because he couldn't pitch very well, was bumped out of the ball game in fifth inning.

Orie Hockett's double to center and Heath's single to right with two out set the Indians up in a 1 to 0 lead in the first inning and that was their allotment for the night after Candini steadied himself.

Came the fifth, and the end of Salveson. The Nats picked up four runs in the process of driving him out of the box. Things commenced with three straight hits, a single by Kampouris, Jake Early's lusty three-bagger to right center, and Johnny Sullivan's single. Stan Spence singled to center for the third run of the inning, and John-

Tigers Hand Harris Seventh Defeat, 7-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 2.—Rookie Southpaw Frank Overmire held the Athletics to five hits today while his Detroit Tiger teammates blasted 14 safeties off three opposing twirlers for a 7-2 triumph. It was Detroit's third win the four-game series and tightened the Tigers' hold on third place in the American League.

The Tigers touched him for four runs on four hits, an error and a sacrifice in the fourth, but Harris stayed in until Roger Cramer and Frank Wakefield singled to start the fifth. Tom Clyde pitched until the ninth when Bert Kuczynski, 1942 University of Pennsylvania football captain, came in. Kuczynski, signed by the A's yesterday, gave up two hits and a walk, but kept the Tigers from scoring.

Dykes' Club Takes Second of Three-Game Series; Borowy Beaten

By the Associated Press

New York, June 2.—The lowly Chicago White Sox, who beat the New York Yankees two straight in an abbreviated series at Chicago recently, stopped the American League champions again today, 2 to 1, behind the five-hit hurling of Lefty Jake Wade to capture the series here, two games to one.

The contest was a pitching duel all the way between Wade and young Hank Borowy, who gave eight hits.

The Yanks got to the Sox southpaw for their only run in the fifth inning when John Lindell tripled and Rollie Hemsley singled. But Borowy gave his advantage away in the eighth.

He had pitched four-hit shutout ball for seven innings. Then in the eighth Chicago loaded the bases on two singles and an intentional pass and Borowy made a wild pitch which allowed Wade to score from third with the tying run.

In the ninth, Luke Appling doubled after two were out, Joe Kuhel was purposely passed, and Mike Tresh dropped a Texas League single into center for the deciding run.

'Navy Bill' Ingram, Ex-Middie Grid Coach, Succumbs at 46

Played Quarterback 3 Years for Navy; Entered Marine Corps Last January

By the Associated Press

Los Gatos, Calif., June 2.—William (Navy Bill) Ingram, 46, a great Navy football player who became head coach of the Naval Academy and the University of California, was found dead in his bed today.

Ingram, a major in the Procurement Branch of the United States Marine Corps, remained at his home yesterday complaining he did not feel well. He died in his sleep, evidently of a heart attack.

"Navy Bill" quit football coaching in 1935 to take an executive position with a grocery chain, and last January was sworn into the Marines. He still looked the part of a strapping, 220-pound athlete when death took him.

3 Years Navy Quarterback

Ingram quarterbacked Navy elevens for three years before being graduated from Annapolis in 1919 with the rank of ensign. In 1922 he resigned his commission and became head football coach at William and Mary College.

After coaching at the University of Indiana for two years Ingram took charge of football at the Naval Academy after the 1925 season. The next year his Navy team played a historic 21 to 21 tie with the Army.

Ingram became coach at California in 1931, bringing L. B. (Stub) Allison, the Golden Bears' present coach, as his assistant. Immediately he snapped the Bears out of the pigskin doldrums and in his first year at California they won eight and lost two.

Ingram leaves his wife and three children: William A. Jr. 17, recently sworn into the Marines

Dodgers Beat Cards, 3-2, Hold 1st Place

By the Associated Press

The Brooklyn Dodgers nipped a ninth inning rally of the St. Louis Cardinals here tonight, staving off the Red Birds, 3-2, to maintain their leadership of the National League by a game and one half.

The Dodgers nicked Max Lanier for two runs in the first inning and put over what proved to be the winning run in the eighth after two were out when Dolph Camilli doubled, Billy Herman was purposely passed and Mickey Owen singled.

Augie Galan's single and a double by Dixie Walker put runners on third and second with no one out in the first inning. After Medwick was retired, Galan scored on a passed ball and Herman's single off Ray Sanders' glove counted Walker.

The Cardinals got one run in the fifth, Jimmy Brown scoring as Martin Marion was being run down between third and second.

In the ninth, Stan Musial walked, Danny Litwhiler, playing his first game in Cardinal toggery, singled for his first hit in four trips, Musial reaching third. Max Macon was relieved by Curt Davis who retired Walker Cooper on a foul pop to Camilli and Ray Sanders grounded to Camilli, Jimmy Brown bounced a hit over the pitchers' mound to Billy Herman, Musial scoring, but when Litwhiler also tried to score he was nailed at the plate.

Max Lanier yielded nine hits to the Dodgers who managed to break even in the four-game series.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 2.—W. M. Beougher's Royal Echo, a 5-year-old daughter of Prince of Wales—Brighter Echo, duplicated her feat of last Thursday when she outsprinted the field to the first turn and was never headed as she scored by a length and a half over G. T. Strother's Saran in the sixth and feature event at this Shenandoah Valley course.

In winning her third race in five attempts this year, the consistent speed merchant was well handled by Stanley Austin as he rode a well judged race to bring her over the 120 feet more than 6 furlongs in 1:16 2-5. Saran made a bold rush entering the stretch but her bid fell short as she held a five-length advantage over Seven Seas. Juliette forced the pace for a half-mile then dropped far out of it as Royal Echo went on to reward her backers with $6.20. The track was fast.

The smart-set in the crowd of approximately 2500 got one of the old-fashioned good things home in the 4½ furlong fifth race when Mrs. Leon Frye's Makann, a 4-year-old making the first start of her career, opened a long lead in the first few strides and then went on to cover the distance in 49 4-5 as she scored by five lengths. The pay-off was $29.20.

Jockey Buddy Root was again the saddle star of the afternoon when he scored with Miss Shotgun, at a $13 pay-off; Palgene, which returned $15.20, and then ended his activity with a score aboard Fair Flame, $7.60 winner of the seventh race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG ETTA, $5.00, $3.80, $3.20; ROUGH EGG, $60.80, $32.80; JACK'S STAR, $3.40.

FLAG ETTA assumed command at once under hustling tactics, was well rated while showing in front and held ROUGH EGG safe in closing test. The latter came from far back and was catching top one at the end. JACK'S STAR moved into contention entering stretch and hung in closing stages. JOHN'S BUDDY had speed. MINSTREL WIT was knocked out of it at first turn.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:47. Off at 1:47½. Winner, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALGENE, $15.40, $5.00, $2.40; TIPPY, $3.00, $2.20; FAIR FIND, $2.60.

PALGENE, not hurried when outrun early, moved by leader when asked, opened long lead on turn and won as rider pleased. TIPPY lacked speed in early stages, went to outside while bettering position and was next best. FAIR FIND ran an even race. OUR ORPHAN showed good speed while setting pace for a half, but tired.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:37½. Winner, H. Howard's b. g. (7) by Halcyon—Sugar Plum. Trained by S. Greene, Jr. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:48⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK HORNER, $4.40, $2.80, $2.20; HOT MAN, $3.20, $2.40; FLYING DUKE, $2.60.

JACK HORNER moved up on outside to take command when rider pleased, drew out to lengthy lead and was never threatened. HOT MAN lacked speed in early stages, responded to pressure in last quarter, but was no threat to top one. FLYING DUKE would not extend himself early and caught tired horses. J. HAL tired after showing in front briefly.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03. Winner, Mrs. Leon Frye's br. f. (4) by Time Maker—Snifty Ann. Trained by V. Arthur. Value to winner, $215; second, $50; third, $25; fourth, $10. Time, 0:49⅘.

Defending Champion, Ex-Titlist Enter Schoolboy Golf Play

Art Myers, Willett Play Tomorrow

Indian Spring Club Host to Qualifying Trials Tomorrow; Entries Close at 6

Defending champion Arthur Myers and Alton Willett, the 1941 champion, will both play in the tenth annual Metropolitan Schoolboy championship for The Washington Post trophy, which starts tomorrow with a qualifying round at Indian Spring.

Frank Emmet will close entries today at 6 p. m. at District 8515 and will make the pairings immediately. Play will start at noon at the Four Corners club.

Myers, who won the title for Roosevelt High last year, is attending Devitt Prep School. Willett will represent Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, where he is a senior. Neither Myers nor Willett have been playing golf to any extent this spring but both have been practicing daily since the announcement of the tournament.

Willett and Myers are virtually sure qualifiers in the 18-hole medal test tomorrow and may stage a two-man duel for the medal. The low 16 scorers will play first and second round matches Saturday morning at Woodmont and the four survivors will set the alarm for 5 o'clock Sunday morning in order to be on hand at Kenwood for the semifinals at 8 o'clock. The finals will start at 11:45.

Judging from the number of entries received thus far the scholastic linksmen are willing to travel to the courses by public transportation in order to compete in the only competitive event of the year definitely scheduled for the junior golfers. Last year's field of 57 players may be equaled if entries continue at the present pace.

Willett and Myers are the outstanding players but George Black of Coolidge, Logan Manders of Wilson, the Clark boys of St. John's, and Blair and Bill McDaniel of Blair, the Argyle Junior Champion, are all capable of staging upsets over the cofavored duo.

Pirates Rally To Score, 3-2, Over Braves

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 2.—Scoring three runs in the ninth on a home run by Elbie Fletcher with a mate on base, Al Lopez' triple, two walks and Frank Colman's single the Pittsburgh Pirates won a 3-to-2 triumph tonight over the Boston Braves before 10,000 fans.

Pitcher Nate Andrew' collapse in the final frame was sudden and unexpected. He passed Johnny Barrett to pave the way for Fletcher's smash and was relieved by Charley Barrett after Lopez' hit.

The Braves had counted their first run when Wally Herbert walked Chester Ross in the third inning with the bases full. They made their second one in the sixth when Clyde Klutz singled with two gone and Vince DiMaggio made a wild throw in returning Andrew's single.

'Navy Bill' Ingram Dies

by his father; Nancy 15, and Anne 10.

His 1926 football team at Annapolis, rated as national champions, was perhaps the finest Navy eleven in the academy's history, although there were some sports writers who declared that the 1918 Navy team captained by Ingram was the best. He was the Nation's highest scorer in 1917.

The academy library file said that "Navy Bill hit the line like a salvo from a triple-gunned turret. He punted magnificently and backed up the line in an airtight fashion. In one Army game Navy Bill completed 18 forward passes; could throw them and catch them with equal facility."

Two brothers were athletes at the Naval Academy, one being Jonas H. Ingram, now commanding the South Atlantic Fleet, and Homer L. Ingram.

Jonas Ingram was graduated from the academy in 1907 and was director of athletics at Annapolis when he became a commander. Homer Ingram was a member of the 1941 academy class.

Browns and Red Sox Split Extra-Inning Double Bill

St. Louis Wins Opener in Twelfth, 7 to 4; Bosox Take Nightcap Behind Terry, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 2.—The Red Sox and St. Louis Browns made their four-game series an all-overtime affair toady by splitting a double-header, the visitors taking the opener, 7-4, in 12 innings, and the home forces the 3-2 nightcap in 10 frames.

After getting off to a three-run start in the first game against Lefty Al Hollingsworth, the Red Sox fell behind and then pulled into a 4-4 tie in the sixth, when Joe Dobson appeared to have regained his control.

The Browns, however, hung on grimly and finally battered Dobson and Mike Ryba, who relieved him, for five hits and three runs to wrap up the game in the twelfth.

Don Gutteridge set off that explosion with a double and Chet Laabs, Mike Chartak, Frankie Hayes and George McQuinn followed with singles, the latter two at Ryba's expense.

Yank Terry tossed a four-hitter at the Browns to gain his first 1943 win in the second game but one of those blows was Laabs' fourth homer of the season, with Milt Byrnes on base, in the first inning. The Red Sox also scored twice in their side of that frame and Al Simmons' single and Jim Tabor's triple provided the deciding run in the tenth.

Carrasquel Faces Tigers Here Tonight

The third-place Detroit Tigers, hottest club in the league during the past week, moved into Griffith Stadium tonight for the opener of a five-game series with the Nats.

Facing a pitching shortage, Manager Ossie Bluege indicated that he would call on Alex Carrasquel for another job tonight, despite the fact the Senor has worked three times in the last five days.

George Case, undoubtedly irked by the fact that George Stirnweiss of the Yankees and Wally Moses of the White Sox were leading him in the race for base stealing honors, stole his seventh last night . . . To move into triple tie for the lead . . . Case made two other thefts during the game, incidentally, stealing extra base hits from Jack Salveson and Ken Keltner with fancy running catches in right field

Elvira Wins Mat Match

Elvira Snodgrass, the Tennessee hillbilly with the Hollywood complex, defeated May Weston, who has appeared here variously as Carol Starr and the Purple Mask, after 18 minutes of the feature wrestling match before 1000 perspiring fans at Turner's Arena last night. Mrs. Snodgrass used a series of body slams and a press to score the victory.

Elvira, who last appeared here as a country lass in a poke bonnet and hightop shoes, took her recent Hollywood junket to heart and last night she appeared positively sleek. She entered the ring in a black satin bathing suit that was flattering, and wearing a mass of hair that was an off-color red.

Babe Sharkey pinned Dick Lever in 7 minutes after both men had been on the floor a number of times.

Dr. John Bonica and Abe Yourist lost the two-man team match in a terrible miscarriage of justice when villainous Frank Bronowicz and the Red Czar took the first two of a scheduled three falls.

George Macricostas, another Golden Greek, defeated Indian Chieftain Bamba Tabu with a back drop and body press in 21.

Gonzaga won its fourteenth consecutive baseball game, defeating Roosevelt, 4 to 2, on the Roosevelt diamond yesterday. The Purple overcame the Rough Riders' two-run attack in the opening inning to score Tancredi and Smith in the second frame.

son beat out a hit to Boudreau for the fourth.

In the sixth the Nats improved their lead to 5-1 with another run, but they were merely warming up for the eighth. Rookie Pete Reynolds was the unhappy figure in the box for Cleveland at the start of that inning, which produced seven more runs.

Jake Early and Johnny Sullivan commenced it with singles to right. A bit later Case doubled to center. Spence was intentionally passed, and Vernon got a run home on a long fly. Johnson drove in two more with a double to center. Priddy walked, and Kampouris singled home the fifth run.

Big Mike Naymick was greeted with Early's second single of the inning that got the sixth run home. Sullivan walked and Candini beat out a hit to Denning for the seventh run. It was some fun.

Reds Wallop Giants in Slugfest, 13-6

By International News Service

Cincinnati, June 2.—The Cincinnati Reds said it with base hits today, hammering five New York pitchers for 18 blows and a 13-to-6 victory.

The Giants got away to a flying start, sending Bucky Walters to the showers in the second after pounding him for seven hits and five runs. But the Reds came back roaring, and mowed down the New York hurlers while Clyde Shoun kept the Giants in hand.

Al Lakeman and Frank McCormick led Cincinnati, with four hits each. Cincinnati shortstop Eddie Miller was charged with his first error in 34 games, and his second of the season.

Phils' Jinx Over Chicubs Holds as They Win Out, 6 to 5

'Schoolboy' Rowe Gets Credit for Victory As Coxmen Take 7 Out of 8 From Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 2.—With three hits each, Babe Dahlgren and Danny Murtaugh paced the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-to-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs this afternoon to conclude the four-game series.

Although forced to retire after pitching eight innings, Schoolboy Rowe won his third game of the season. Newell Kimball relieved Rowe, but Jack Kraus had to finish when the Cubs threatened to tie the score in the ninth.

Each team made 11 hits. The Phillies got theirs off Claude Passeau, Henry Wise and Bill Fleming. Passeau gave up six hits in four innings.

It was the Phillies' seventh victory in eight games with the Cubs this season.

Hanbury Gets $2000 Offer to Meet Wilson

Bout Depends on Wilson's Performance Here Monday Night, However; Villar on Card

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

An offer of $2000 with a privilege of a percentage has been made Lew Hanbury, recent conqueror of N. B. A. Featherweight Champion Jackie Callura, for a bout in the near future with Jackie Wilson, by Promoter Joe Turner, it was announced yesterday.

Lew Hanbury, sr., father and handler of "Larruping Lew," immediately forwarded the offer to New York to Al (Weskit) Weill, veteran pilot, who recently paid $3500 for the managerial contract of the local scrapper. Weill has not answered as yet.

Wilson, who arrives here tomorrow to complete training for his 10-round bout Monday night at Griffith Stadium with Jimmy "The Spoiler" Phillips, who split a pair of decisions with Hanbury here, must, of course, defeat Phillips before getting the bout

Should "The Spoiler" who knoked off four local boys, Bernie Cady, Roy Lewis and Oscar Wright in addition to splitting with Hanbury, succeed in whipping Wilson, he might possibly be booked for a third and rubber bout with Hanbury, but it is doubtful if Turner would guarantee Lew a $2000 purse to meet a fighter he has met here twice previously. Weill's connection with Goldie Ahearn also may have something to do with whether or not Hanbury meets either.

Featuring the card Monday which Turner has shifted to the ball park, is the 10-round tussle involving Al Hart, 235-pound Army War College Negro, and hard hitting Claudio Villar, heavyweight champion of Spain and Cuba, who has showed here twice before and won "newspaper" decisions over Bob Pastor and Gus Dorazio, although the judges saw it otherwise. Villar, incidentally, floored Pastor, who once went 15 rounds with Louis.

Meanwhile, Jack Laken, Wilson's business manager, arrived in town yesterday and expressed willingness to have Wilson meet either Jackie Callura or Willie Pep, N. B A. and New York State feather champions, respectively in addition to Hanbury, here this summer under the Joe Turner banner, provided terms were right. Lew (Honest Brakeman) Diamond. Turner's talent scout and New York contact, is reportedly in Manhattan at present, trying to Conference Sets Up Diet 'Yardstick'

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., June 2.—The United Nations food conference set up today a proposed "yardstick" of diet and charged governments with responsibility for helping the less fortunate citizens toward achievement of that nutritional level.

It proposed at the same time that all nations inaugurate educational programs in "Eating for Health."

Declaring that diets of the greater part of mankind are conducive to impaired physical development, ill health and untimely death, the conferees said the "vulnerable" groups, among whom it named expectant and nursing mothers, heavy workers, and low-income families, were especially in need of public help.

The well-fed citizen, the sample diet stated, would consume between 228 and 250 quarts of milk and between 228 and 276 eggs every year, plus about 900 pounds of other foods selected according to their nutrition values.

Conference experts said that the sample probably would have to be modified in various countries "to meet existing economic and agricultural realities," but that innumerable combinations of individual foods may be devised" which would measure up to the yardstick.

Foods listed in the sample yardstick include, besides milk and eggs, starch-rich tubers, roots, fruits; mature leguminous seeds and nuts; vitamin C rich fruits; leafy, green, yellow vegetables; other vegetables and fruits; meats, fish, poultry; sugars and fats.

The educational program, the conferees said, must spread knowledge throughout the whole community so that it may influence governmental action and the activities of all those who have to deal with questions relating to food.

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome

Sour Stomach · Jerky Nerves · Loss of Appetite · Underweight · Digestive Complaints · Weakness · Poor Complexion

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system... insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient ... and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat ... to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality ... pep ... become animated ... more attractive!

Build Sturdy Health so that the Doctors may better serve our Fighting Forces

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. S.S.S.Co.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

10 Senators Demand WMB Post for Wilson

Ten influential Senators have signed a letter to Super Czar Jimmy Byrnes demanding that Vice Chairman Charles Wilson of War Production Board be placed in charge of production policies of the new War Mobilization Board. The letter carries an implied threat by the Senators they'll raise the devil if Byrnes attempts to transfer production control, especially over aircraft, to the Army as has been rumored. In event Wilson gets the appointment he'd retain his WPB job. . . The brother of Beardsley Ruml (he's the author of the tax forgiveness plan the Administration moved heaven and earth to beat) has been given a job by the Office of War Information in its New York office. . . The Government's flossy Meridian Hill Apartment for girls has some new roomers—bedbugs.

Harold Graves, top-drawer Treasury official who is chief of the War Savings staff, will be appointed an assistant commissioner of the Internal Revenue Bureau and he'll handle the new withholding tax which the Government will start collecting on July 1. War Savings will be merged with the Victory Drive unit and Ted Gamble will be made its chief. Gamble now heads the victory drive and he has been a bang-up success. He was ready to resign to return to his private business but Secretary Morgenthau persuaded him to stay. . . . The Army is guarding it like a secret weapon, but it appears that a gymnasium is being built at the Pentagon Building. A gymnasium and recreation hall is what people say it is. It's located on the north side of Pentagon near the bus runway. It's all very much of a deep dark mystery, as much of a puzzle as the reported auditorium that's being constructed in the new War Department Building, which is the best way to attract attention and damage a good project.

Letters received from blind persons seeking Federal employment are now answered by the Civil Service Commission in Braille. The letters are written by a blind steno in the commission's medical division. . . . The newsreels on our dedication of the GOVERMENT GIRL warplanes have inspired several Federal agencies in the field to conduct campaigns to buy war equipment. Field employes of the Veterans' Administration, for example, are planning a campaign for funds. . . . Maritime Commission has been assigned the two tempo buildings which the Army vacated over near the new armory in Southwest. It's proposed that War Shipping be given all Maritime's space in the Commerce Building. Maritime is kicking about the move and it may be stopped. . . . General Accounting will remain at Friendship indefinitely. The Government has just approved the construction of a new building there to house files.

Credit for Tolan Group

President Roosevelt admitted that the basis of his new Office of War Mobilization was inspired by reports from the Tolan, Kilgore, and Truman committees. Most everyone admits that the Tolan committee did a great job but it's the only House committee that wasn't recreated at the present session of Congress. The reason: publicity-greedy Representative Dies believed the Tolan committee would take over his investigation of the Japs . . . Bituminous Coal will have to make a cut in staff. It asked for $800,000 to carry its present staff to August 24. It got $700,000 . . . Representative Anderson wants to investigate Ben Cohen and "see what he is doing to change our system of free enterprise and way of life."

It looks very much like the revolution will begin on June 30. Men in Government are enrolling by the scores in B. S. M. (Brotherhood of Sensible Men) and on June 30 they say they'll tear off their heavy coats and stiff collars and wear comfortable slacks to work. B. S. M. was proposed in an article that appeared here last Saturday. The piece, which was applauded throughout the Federal service, was written by Charles Planck of Civil Aeronautics. A few more hot days like yesterday and B. S. M. will have thousands of members. Many men have written in to protest that June 30 is too far away. They want to start the slack dress immediately. What do you think?

I frankly believe that B. S. M. has a real chance to catch on. Planck wrote an amusing letter, but it was full of good sense. After all, our habits are changed by war. The dressing customs of men in Government were changed during World War I. Did you know, for example, that we had an overall brigade in Government here in 1918? Yes; men wore overalls to work. Not many joined the movement, but World War I did bring about a revolution in the clothing habits of men in Government.

Prior to World War I each man in Government had his own "office coat," usually black and made of a light material. Protocol demanded that men wear coats in their offices at all times. These coats were tossed aside during the war and men for the first time rolled up their sleeves and opened their collars. It was a great relief and men didn't go back to their "office coats" after the war. Perhaps if slacks become stylish now men in Government won't return to stiff collars and heavy suits after this war.

Baltimore Methodists Open Parley

Session Attended By 1000 Ministers, Laymen From D. C., Nearby Sections

Several local and nearby clergy and laymen yesterday were chosen as delegates to next year's General Methodist Conference, as the Baltimore annual conference opened sessions in Baltimore's Mount Vernon Methodist Church. Almost 1000 ministers from the District and Maryland's Western Shore are attending.

Ministerial delegates elected were Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the East Washington Methodist District; Dr. Harry W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church here; Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College and former pastor of Cherrydale (Va.) Methodist Church, and the Rev. E. C. Riggin, Baltimore.

Lay delegates named were D. Stewart Patterson, Henry Gilligan and Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, all of Washington, and George W. Crabbe, J. H. Baker and Harry Grace all of Baltimore.

Speculation at the conference centered about the possibility that Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington, retired, might be called back as Bishop Leonard's successor, at least temporarily.

Under church rules, a successor to Bishop Leonard will be chosen by the general convention, to be held next year. However, there was a possibility, officials said, the college of bishops might meet before then to select an interim head for the Washington area.

Bishop Hughes, ordained a bishop in Baltimore in 1908, was presiding bishop of the Washington area for eight years, beginning in 1932. Leonard took office as presiding bishop in 1940.

450 Awarded Diplomas at G. W. Exercises

Four hundred and fifty George Washington University students received diplomas at the 122d annual commencement exercises of the university in Constitution Hall last night.

During the ceremony five graduates received the alumni achievement award. They are Mary Agnes Brown, first officer, WAAC, Dr. Bernard J. Mayo, David Edward Finley, H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld and Frank L. Yates. Ray Smith Bassler, professor of geology at George Washington for 40 years, and Walter Lewis Moll, professor of law since 1924, were admitted to the status of professor emeritus.

President Cloyd Heck Marvin delivered the charge to the graduates. He warned them, "As no individual can be his own and sole defender, so in this modern world no nation can be its own defender." "Stabilization and enjoyment will be found only in the spiritual way, pledging our lives for others," he said.

Paul V. McNutt was one of the visitors at the ceremony. His daughter Louise McNutt, who is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, was among the recipients of degrees.

City News in Brief

Driver Cleared in Death

The traffic death Monday of Walter Young Muir, 35, of 1532 Forty-first Street Northwest, was declared accidental by a coroner's jury yesterday and the verdict exonerated Robert F. Rowe, 32, of 614 A Street Northeast.

Muir died at Emergency Hospital a few hours after being struck by a Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Line bus on M Street Northwest near Potomac Street. The driver was freed after it was testified the victim walked into the path of the bus.

Cleveland on Council

Washington I. Cleveland, Washington manager of the American Automobile Association, was appointed by the Commissioners yesterday vice chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council, succeeding George E. Keneipp, who resigned May 28.

Keneipp, formerly manager of the Washington Keystone Automobile Association, resigned the position because he felt that as deputy civilian defense director, and, therefore, District employe, it would not be proper for him to remain as an officer of the Commissioners' advisory council. He will remain as a member of the council to which he has belonged for the past 14 years.

Dr. Marshall's Call

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, still is debating his call to the pastorate of Highland Park Presbyterian Church, Dallas, one of Texas' largest congregations, it was said following last night's meeting of the local church's session (official board). He has served here since 1937.

Plan for Canteen Benefit

BIKES AID IN GAS SHORTAGE—Junior hostesses yesterday pedaled to the Stage Door Canteen (the gasoline shortage precluded other means of travel) to make last minute preparations for the opening performance of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," which is to open at the Willard Roof Music Hall on Monday, June 7. After their committee work was over, the girls gave bicycle rides to two service men who were waiting for the Canteen to open. Henderson Volunteers as Congress Witness

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Leon Henderson, ubiquitous "Peck's Bad Boy" in the eyes of Congress, was back again yesterday before a Congressional Committee for the first time since his resignation as administrator of OPA—and this time under his own steam, without invitation.

His pretty secretary, Lou Landreth, had been summoned before the Smith committee of the House—investigating the acts of executive agencies beyond their authority—to testify concerning signatures on amendments to the Rent Control Act, and Henderson came along and requested the opportunity to testify.

Miss Landreth, who was secretary to Henderson as OPA administrator and has remained his secretary since he went into private business, told the committee that she had signed Henderson's name to an OPA rent regulation, causing the validity of the amendment to be sharply challenged by the committee.

The amendment, No. 7 of the Maximum Rent Regulation, provides that a purchaser of a home must pay one-third of the purchase price down before he may evict the tenant on the property. Violation of the amendment carries a penalty of $5000 or a year in jail.

Henderson told the committee that "in any case" if anybody tried to avoid paying the penalty for evading a proper regulation of the United States Government he would go forward in court "with a great deal of gusto" and say the signature was his. He said he had been informed by a former Attorney General of the United States that if he were willing in court to acknowledge a signature as his that was the end of the matter.

The former OPA administrator was sharply questioned by Representative Peterson (Democrat) of Georgia. Peterson asked Henderson why, if it were legal for him to have a secretary sign a facsimile of his signature to a document which could impose jail sentences on American citizens, Congress had to send a bill by plane to Miami, Fla., to obtain the signature of the President of the United States. Peterson asked why the Congress had to wait for the actual signature of the President at all, and why a secretary could"t sign laws for him.

Henderson replied:

"I bet you there are skeletons in that closet, too. From what I have heard around, just little clews I've picked up you could question the signing of a lot of laws."

School Board Adopts Plan For Juveniles

Three-Way Program Designed to Provide Aid to Pupils in Junior High Units

After consideration of a study of the causes and manifestations of juvenile delinquency among District junior high school students, the Board of Education yesterday approved a three-way duration program designed to counteract the wartime problem.

The board authorized Acting Superintendent Robert L. Haycock to appoint a school committee of faculty members and ad advisory committee composed of civic and social agency representatives to study the situation toward the end of reduction of prevailing high rates, while the school administration would consider procedures suggested.

Cited as factors necessary for decrease of juvenile delinquency were more guidance and counseling for both pupils and parents, increase in the number of attendance officers to follow up cases of truancy and additional playground space for recreation.

Causes contributing to the general delinquency among the teenagers were given as unsupervised homes because of the many parents going into war jobs, lack of recreation due to crowded living conditions and increases in available spending money among young people.

A proposal that senior high school students who attend schools to prepare them for West Point and Annapolis during the major part of their final year, be allowed to return and receive a public high school diploma was deferred by the board as several members protested that it would lead to relaxation of prevailing standards.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent, pointed out that currently only three or four pupils would be affected by the ruling, which would be on a duration basis. The present policy, which requires a student to be in residence his final year in high school in order to be eligible for a diploma, exempts from graduation students who could qualify on the basis of grades, and predicts a postwar problem of educated but uncertified youths.

Postlude

Chopin, Liszt, Brahms on Shapiro Bill

By Ray C. B. Brown

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Maxim Shapiro on Wednesday night in the fourth of six historical piano recitals. Program: Fantasy in F minor, Etudes in C major, F minor, E flat minor and C sharp minor; Barcarolle, Mazurka in C sharp minor, Tarantella, Impromptu in G flat major, Polonaise in F sharp minor (Chopin), Sonata in B minor (Liszt), Intermezzo in B flat minor, Romanze in F major, Rhapsody in G minor (Brahms).

Maxim Shapiro's progressive tour of piano literature in six recitals arrived last evening in the romantic milieu of Chopin, Liszt and Brahms. Naturally, it was Chopin, the unique and incomparable poet of the keyboard, who received the most attention, and it was with the splendid F minor Fantasy that the recital began. Other items from the French-Polish composer's bequest to beauty in music were four of the Etudes, the Barcarolle, the C-sharp minor Mazurka, the Tarantella, the G-flat major Impromptu and the F-sharp minor Polonaise.

BROWN

To Liszt was vouchsafed only one example of his peculiar blend of technique and temperament, the B minor Sonata, which is so odd an admixture of sincerity and Byronic attitudinizing. Brahms fared better with at least three slections: the B-flat minor Intermezzo, the F major Romance and the G minor Rhapsody. Students of the compositions programmed may have found the occasion interesting, but auditors curious to know more about piano literature must have been disappointed.

A comprehensive survey of that literature cannot be made in six recitals. Yet one wonders why Mr. Shapiro omitted from this program Chopin's remarkable contemporary, Charles Henri Valentin Morhange, who signed his music Henri Alkan. Three years younger than Chopin, Alkan outlived him by 37 years, and produced about the same number of published opus numbers. So persistent has been the neglect, the misunderstanding and the belittlement of his compositions, that it almost seems as though there had been a conspiracy to suppress him entirely. Liszt admired him, and appreciated his individual and original quality. Perhaps it was Alkan's unconventionality and his daring in technique that alienated him from the public, for it has been said of him that he had a complete disregard for the conversational amiabilities of music.

Mr. Shapiro also had the opportunity to present something by Liszt that is not so often played as the B minor Sonata. One would have been grateful for a hearing of "Le Lugubre Gondole," "Mazeppa," "Czardas Obstine," "Czardas Macabre," some of the charming "Christmas Tree" pieces, or a few of the "Hungarian Portraits."

D. C. Area Gas Supplies Fade Fast

T Coupon Design Changed in Drive On Black Market; Rules Tightened

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Washington's scant retail gasoline supplies were dwindling fast again yesterday as gasless motorists kept frantic dealers pumping to the bottom of their tanks while the Government moved to stamp out black market operations by changing the appearance of the coveted "T" tickets.

As a consequence of the panic buying by motorists, wholesale distributors have refused to deliver all the gasoline desired by filling stations and have retained in their big tanks a small "reserve," against failure of deliveries again.

No Change in Shipments

Shipments by truck from Greensboro, N. C., continue to bring 8000 barrels a day into the city, but there has been no change in the quantities received by tank car and barge.

Government officials say the Greensboro reserves will be exhausted early next week. In view of this, local gasoline wholesalers fear another famine.

Hence they have tried to build up a small backlog that would be available for absolutely essential driving, such as needs of physicians, fire and police cars, in event the truck shipments fail.

However, most of the filling stations in the city had received some gasoline yesterday, although the wholesalers are cutting down on quotas allowed them.

Situation Eased

Due solely to the truck shipments, officials said, there had been some easing of the situation to date.

Effective yesterday was a cut in the value of B and C passenger coupons from three to two and one-half gallons. Ration boards were also instructed not to grant supplemental gasoline even to warworkers in the shortage area.

OPA Director Prentiss M. Brown said that persons who felt they just had to get more gasoline in order to get to theri jobs, even warworkers, simply would have to move nearer their work, eliminating occupational allotments. He asserted that "the gasoline isn't here."

The OPA is keeping its new design for the T tickets secret until they go into effect in mid-July, in order to prevent counterfeiting.

Supplements Denied

Supplemental gasoline is being denied even for car pools where a worker lives within walking distance of his work or other means of transportation is available.

The order allowing five gallons of gasoline to a serviceman home on furlough also has been revoked.

The new orders are in effect in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, the District of Columbia and eight eastern counties in West Virginia.

In the meantime Representative Hartley (Republican) of New Jersey, asked Congressmen from the 12 Eastern Seaboard States affected, to meet Saturday to hear experts in the petroleum and transportation fields.

He said in a letter of invitation that recent OPA changes in rationing rules had raised much doubt as to the efficient administration of the program.

OCD Needs 150 Women Volunteers

An urgent appeal for 150 women volunteers to replace members of the armed services was made yesterday by Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the Civilian Defense Civilian Volunteer Bureau. Mrs. Bernton said that although the response to the first call for volunteers had been excellent, still more are needed for this work. Women are asked to telephone the central office, REpublic 5105 between 9:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m.

Y.M.C.A. Fiesta Tomorrow

Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, will be the guest of honor tomorrow at the annual benefit fiesta sponsored by the Pan American Club of the Y. M. C. A. in the men's gymnasium, 1736 G Street Northwest, at 8:30 p. m. Other guests will include many ambassadors from Latin-American countries.

A program made up of entertainers, including a Venezuela Indian dance as one of its 10 attractions, will be presented. Ramon Ramos, president of the club, will be master of ceremonies, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin will be hostess in charge of the reception of honored guests.

The proceeds from the benefit will be used for scholarships and endowment for Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. camp for boys.

OPA Suspensions Penalize Violators Of Gas Rationing

The Minute Service Station, Twenty-first Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, operated by the District Automotive Co., was suspended from selling gasoline at the station for period of five days yesterday, on charges of discrimination.

The suspension order was issued by OPA Acting Hearing Commissioner Clifford R. Snider, after a hearing.

Suspended also was the ration book of a driver who was accused of having bought 9 gallons of gasoline on three loose "T" tickets. He said he was on his way back from Pimlico.

At the same time the OPA announced the placing of charges of violating the pleasure driving ban against 60 Washington motorists, bringing the total to date to to 760.

Bride's Great Happiness in Marriage Is Spoiled Some by Self-Made, Successful Young Husband's Spendthrift Generosity Toward Brothers, Sisters

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 18 months and my husband makes me happy in every respect except one. He comes from a family where there were few of the material luxuries during his younger life. His father is a fairly young man (49) and able-bodied, but not very ambitious. My husband had to leave college in his junior year to support himself. From that day forth he set himself the task of providing for his younger brothers and sisters. (He is the eldest.)

My husband is very ambitious and since we have been married he has attained a very good earning power, considering his youth. I am employed, too, though I wouldn't have to work. I enjoy my job moderately and like the feeling of security and independence that working gives me; but there are times when I long to stop. When we were married I felt that my husband should relinquish his habit of giving members of his family all the things they ask for; but he didn't feel that way. He feels it is his duty to give his brothers and sisters money to help them realize their ambitions. In general, he wishes to act like their bountiful "rich uncle."

I feel we should be saving money for the future, when we can have our own home and family. As it is, we live in an apartment and every time we save up some money, some member of his family decides they must do something that will call for a fair share of it. My husband is very generous with me,—even to a fault. And we are both rather extravagant about our personal expenditures. At present, all his brothers and sisters are self-supporting;—except one. In the past I have let him have his way about giving money to his family; but now another 'demand" is developing.

One sister who is now employed and has good prospects for promotion has decided to change to another "career," which would mean several years' preparatory study. My husband is at present away for several months, but I know he has written stating that he wishes to help with the new venture. I have written him that I do not approve and that his attitude makes me feel very shut out of his life and alone. Also, I have tried previously to explain my sentiments to him, but he always says I just don't understand his feeling toward his family.

I feel it is futile for me to go on working,—as it just makes that much more money to throw away. If I didn't work, I believe he would still wish to "help out" his family; but at least I wouldn't feel I was contributing to it. I am fond of all his family. They are lovable; but their attitude seems to be that our wealth is boundless, which it is not. My own family isn't wealthy, but we have each learned to live within our individual means, and never look to each other for aid and support. Can you suggest any way in which I can stop this steady drain on our savings? Or am I selfish in wanting to do so? D. R. E.

He's Playing Big Shot For Immature Reasons

DEAR D. R. E.: Your husband's Santa Claus attitude toward his brothers and sisters is not commendable. You are not being selfish, but, rather, sensible, in strongly objecting to it. Lending a helping hand to kinfolk in real emergency is one thing; and playing the role of sucker or big shot in relation to them is something else again, and one which reflects no credit either on him who too freely gives, or on those who parasitically trade on such hand-outs. There is a theatrical quality of sentimentality about your husband's avowed "feeling toward his family" which any psychologist would eye with suspicion, as indicative of his erstwhile failure to outgrow and put aside the close familial attachments of childhood,—which is an essential first step, indeed the first long step, on the road to maturity.

It is well known that any considerable failure to achieve emotional detachment toward one's immediate family,—one parents and/or brothers and sisters,—severely handicaps one in the field of marriage. And to the extent that your husband had failed, at the time of marriage, to digest the true fact that his relation to his family was essentially a biological happenstance, which left him on the threshold of adulthood as free to go his way and shape his own destiny as these long-time intimate associates were free to do likewise on their own power, to that extent was he earmarked to make something of a mess of his marriage. His theory that the role of loyal husband could be made compatible with the self-elected duty of "giving money to his brothers and sisters to help them realize their ambitions" is a sentimental contradiction of the fundamental nature of marriage, which inexorably requires, for success, that husband and wife shall so conduct themselves, in relation to each other, that there can be no doubt in anybody's mind that each is the object of the other's constant, protective, preferential "first" devotion.

Gives Wife Reason To Feel Swindled

In making no distinction between his financial duty to his kinfolk and his wife, in handsomely meeting each claimant's wants with impartial beneficence, your husband is giving you reason to feel somehow swindled in relation to him. Your feeling of being "very shut out of his life and alone" has unargueable validity. He has placed you in the position of being simply a late comer and co-equal shareholder in his affections,—and not (shall we say?) the majority stockholder, much less a full partner in his affairs. He subordinates you to the subtly humiliating role of one more beloved pensioner on his bounty,—which, for a woman of emotional maturity, intelligence and independent character, is an intolerable status, incompatible with wifely self-respect, whole-hearted devotion and creative interest in sustaining her husband's morale and augmenting his progress.

Your only chance of righting the situation consists in bluntly charging your husband with his mistaken performance and all its potentially destructive implications,—which include (1) a disservice to his brothers and sisters, through denying them the splendid discipline of learning to live within their individual means; (2) failure to foresightedly provide the wherewithal to have a family and a home of his own, some day; and (3) the damage being done to your personal relationship by his too generously divided allegiance, which makes it increasingly difficult for you to sustain a single-hearted devotion to him.

More Vital Problem Than Money Involved

Tell him this is far more than a "money" problem; that it embraces the far more vital and serious question of whether he is first of all a husband, or first of all a son and brother,—and that it is high time he chose decisively between the several roles, since you cannot consent to spend the remainder of your life trying to adapt to his confused and kaleidoscopic performance. Let him know you are thoroughly dissatisfied with the trend of events; and that he need not expect you either to pretend contentment with his divided allegiance, on the one hand; or to go on, year after year, vaguely and spasmodically protesting about it, on the other hand. Give him to understand that the situation has reached the showdown stage, and that unless he takes a turn toward mature behavior in this crisis, your relationship must gradually decline into a sterile perfunctory bond,—for which sorry state he will be chiefly responsible. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Everyone's concerned with food. Government officials, grocerymen, produce men, growers and homemakers. Some women are being pessimists about food, complaining that columnists could suggest something besides macaroni in place of potatoes. Other cooks are having a grand time adventuring with new dishes.

Martha Ellyn

If macaroni isn't the chosen dish, then turn to rice as a starch food. Certainly it is a compatible food getting along with a number of other foods in commendable fashion.

If you are one of the persons into whose bin no potatoes have fallen, then make an attractive rice dish. A rice mold on an attractive platter, center-filled with meat—creamed or plain will be a nutritious dish as well as an appealing one.

Today, in the dinner menu a rice ring with meat is suggested. Here is the recipe for making it.

RICE RING WITH MEAT

Mix 1 tablespoon corn starch and ¼ cup cold milk. Heat 1 cup cooked rice, 1 cup milk and ¼ teaspoon salt in a double boiler. Add corn starch mixture and cook 15 minutes. Fold in the beaten white of one egg. Turn into a ring mold. Bake in 375 degree oven for 10 minutes. Unmold onto a large platter and serve filled with meat. Yield: 6 servings.

Apples can make grand desserts. One of the simplest ones made from this fruit is Peanut-Honey Apple Crisp. Here is the recipe for making it:

PEANUT-HONEY APPLE CRISP

Peel and slice 6 medium cooking apples into shallow buttered baking dish; pour ¼ cup honey over apples. Mix ½ cup flour, ¼ cup brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt together, then cut in 3 tablespoons butter and 3 tablespoons peanut butter until crumbly. Sprinkle evenly over top of apples. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 30 minutes, or until apples are done. Serve warm or cold with milk or cream. Serves 6.

A Bag of Tricks

Even an air-conditioned building and a 4 o'clock coke won't prevent a certain amount of defrosting from the summer heat. We've found a kit that occupies just the smallest space in your desk or purse and it's the cleverest bit of dressing-table magic we've seen.

A lovely brocade bag holds a plastic cylinder tube that has five compartments. Unscrew them and you find cleansing cream, night cream, foundation cream, rouge and powder—a good supply of each! The kit also contains a small bottle of skin lotion, a spatula for refilling the compartments, and there's still room for a comb and a mirror. A portable dressing table, we'd say, and only $1.75.

Cologne in a Compact—

Here's a new development in cosmetics that's easy to take! It's cologne in a solid form, and you can carry this small compact in your purse in a minimum of space and without danger of spilling the contents. Just rub your fingers over the surface of the cologne and apply as you would a liquid cologne. It's a concentrated fragrance and just a dot leaves a cool, refreshing odor. $1.50.

Another new in colognes is a liquid cream cologne that is nongreasy. It's compensation for the warm days ahead to have this delightful fragrance at your finger tips. It's supposed to leave the skin soft, and the scent is deep enough to please but not to distract the occupants of surrounding territory. 75c.

Oil Stain Removal

Oil stains are of two types. Mineral oil can be removed without difficulty. However, cooking oils and animal fats grow more difficult to remove as they age. Apply a dry cleaning solvent as soon as possible, tamping with a cloth pad. Then rinse thoroughly in dry-cleaning solvent to remove the ring and allow to dry.

The Gentler Sex — By Malvina Lindsay

Woman With a Hoe

On the palms of her hands are calluses,
Despite her heavy, smelly oilcloth gloves;
Her back is stiff and the muscles of her legs and shoulders
Ache with a dull soreness, while her ankles threaten
To snap under her sagging weight.
She feels the rivulets of water
Streaming down her body, and she must constantly
Wipe her blinded eyes, her wet face; loosen the shirt

* * * *

The once kindly sun that she courted so arduously
On beach and roof-top, in solariums,
Beating her on the back, wearing her down, pursuing her,
Drenching her in sweat;
Good old Mother Earth, whose feel under her feet
Was once a poetic delight,
Is now either a hard and unyielding opponent
Or a treacherous bog of mud out of which continually

* * * *

Show round tips of blackness;
The curls in her permanent wave are turning the wrong way;
Her face is flushed and shiny, and if Maud Muller's judge
Were to pass that way
He would never carry her away in his memory.
Her overalls and heavy shirt bear no likeness
To the smart gardening togs fashion magazines
Display for "milady."

* * * *

Her days are a continuing battle, with no time off
For rest or reinforcements.
Whenever she turns her back a new weed springs into being.
When showers drop out of the sky.
To her they are not raining violets,
But, rather, acres of crab grass and wild morning glories,
To combat which she must plod forth in cumbersome overshoes
To dig in the mud. When the rains do not come
She must carry water to thirsty plants
And fertilizer to hungry ones.

* * * *

When the warm, dry days come, she faces
The battle of the bugs;
She must dust the tomato vines with lime to keep away flea beetles,
And she must dress them in neat paper collars
To defeat the cutworms;
She must extend the Battle of the Solomons
To the Japanese beetles if she would preserve her corn and her beans;
She must watch the onions lest they become silvery
From the onset of thisps and she must guard spinach from aspids,
And defeat battalions of creeping things.

* * * *

Unseen and unsung she labors in back yard and vacant lot,
But she is rewarded
Not only in the primitive satisfaction of feeding her own,
But in the soul-enlarging realization
That every stroke of her hoe may mean one more bean.
One more tomato for the world's harvest,
So she holds on as her men far away, hold against gunfire, sharing with them
An eternal stake in humanity's future.

Permanent Is Basis for Cool, Summer Hair-do

By Martha Ellyn

Women are learning to do many things for themselves. One help-your-self-service they are effecting is the care of the hair. There is no longer enough time for beauty salon attendants to give service to everyone wanting it. So it is up to us to help ourselves.

We can brush our hair, shampoo and set it. But we have no alternative when it comes to a permanent. If the best results are to be obtained from a permanent, be sure to go to a beauty salon which will give special attention to your type of hair. All hair does not respond alike to the same type of permanent.

If you want to be completely comfortable during the permanent process a cold wave will insure such. No heat, no metal gadgets, no pads to give that heavy, heavy hangs over your head," feeling. The improved process starts the wave at the hair line so that the permanent will not grow away from you as quickly as when it is started an inch or so away from the head.

Another convenience of this cool permanent is that it bathes while it waves. After the process is completed the hair can be set immediately without another shampoo. The result is a wave that is like a pushup wave which you can easily care for at home. If you want to know where to get this cold permanent these hot days, call National 4200, extension 324.

Mind Over Matter

By Jeanne Contini

Half the art of keeping cool is looking it. Candidly, the intrinsic refrigerating values of any given garment are strictly limited. The best it can do, is not make you any hotter than you already are. As the mercury gallops up the thermometer you are likely to succumb to a total wilt unless you supplement purely physical remedies with other means. (This, of course, assumes you have no swimming pool handy.)

According to the Office of War Information, more than 50 hotels, department stores, and office buildings have given over their air-conditioning equipment in response to the Government's appeal, in order to assure controlled temperatures in essential war plants. With the ribbon counter and lobby retreats cut off, we will have further need to rely on the powers of suggestion for keeping cool. Here are a few psychological ice cubes which have helped us out of the frying pan.

Color is of utmost importance. One of the most distressing manifestations of intense heat is the shimmering glare that rises from the streets. Dark glasses will not only rest your eyes but actually will give a partial illusion of cooling shade. Let other people worry about whether you are Greta Garbo.

The shade of your dress, like ice cream or a frosted goblet of mint julep, can look cool and inviting although it virtually does nothing to lower your temperature. Shortsleeved black or dark green dresses worn with clean white gloves look and stay much more refreshing in the city than do pastels or all-white. The latter along with vibrant tropical shades need the relief of green foliage for background.

Stay as neat as you can . . . general mussiness is another detail that definitely influences your morale. We give this to you with moderation in the full knowledge that even a penguin would look ruffled after riding local buses and trolleys. Still, some fabrics hold up better than others, especially those with body; rayon jersey, shantung. Pastel cottons for town should be confined to seersucker, gingham, or tebilized stuffs that are wrinkle-resistant . . . rumpled white has the quality of looking as though someone just rolled it out of a towel and forgot to iron, which is another reason why we recommend dark dresses for town.

Perfume is kind of a moot question, being mainly a matter of personal taste. In summer, though, a sultry cloud of tigerish scent is apt to be more suffocating than provocative. Herbal colognes and light flower fragrances undoubtedly add to your sense of freshness. Just a touch, however, as the line between suggesting and over-powering is very fine—in the field of noses.

Since utter hatlessness at noonday is a clear invitation to sunstroke, we advise a brim, preferably big, or a parasol. One or the other is physically essential and incidentally very nice-looking.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

When the National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club of Washington puts on a friendship project, members see it through to the last degree.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Each year the club takes the folk of a different country with whom to get better acquainted. For several months now, the club has been emphasizing China. So tomorrow night the committee on Chinese friendship will hold a gala social meeting, 8:30 o'clock, at the Washington Hotel.

Honor guests will be several of those attached to China Defense Supplies, China Lend-Lease, and students attending universitties in Washington. Among those expected to be present are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Young, K. H. Teou, Col. C. Y. Liu, Maj. David Li, Maj. T. A. Wei Li, Miss Jennie Hong, Stanley Shen and the Rev. Dr. Hung.

Object of the get-together is to foster more scholarships for Chinese friendship include States. This is the second of many affairs planned by the club's committee.

Pan American Fiesta

Come tomorrow night, 8:30 o'clock, the Pan-American Good Neighbor Forum will fling its annual fiesta in Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest. Miss Clara Langmack, chairman, has planned a program of Latin-American songs and dances to be followed by social dancing. Oswaldo Lobo, son of Fernando Lobo, Minister Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, and Miss Cecilia Conclaves, also of Brazil, will dance the samba. Singers group of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women, directed by Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, will present a group of Latin songs. Marcus Seeling, a young Brazilian, gives a group of native piano selections.

Doings of the Day

D. C. Division, UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY sponsors program and ceremony honoring the birthday anniversary of Jefferson Davis, 3 p. m., in Statuary Hall, U. S. Capitol. Dr. Armand T. Eyler, pastor, St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, gives the invocation and Mrs. Harold Walbridge Robbins, president of the D. C., U. D. C., gives the welcoming speech. Senator James O. Eastland is principal speaker of the day. NEBRASKA STATE SOCIETY holds reception and dance at the Shoreham Hotel. Lyle O'Rourke, president of the organization, estimates that 7500 Nebraskans now are living in Washington.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The establishment of a good supply of breast milk is so vital a factor (especially in this war emergency) no means should be overlooked which would bring it about.

Bottle feedings have been so improved the privileged mother is far too apt to let herself be talked into bottle-feeding her baby instead of making the effort or suffering the discomforts that may be her lot the first six weeks of nursing.

Let's argue this way: Good milks may be harder and harder to get. The summer always is an unpredictable factor in upsetting the bottle-fed baby. The safety of breast milk and the benefits it bestows on the infant fortunate enough to have it, cannot be overemphasized.

This is the milk intended for the baby, it is sterile, suited to his needs and ever-present. Don't let the little discomforts or the empty advice of empty-headed persons, discourage your efforts. Even four or five months of breast feeding will be a big start toward a healthy childhood.

The usual procedure, the first few days, is to put the baby to the breast every six hours. When the true milk comes in in about three days, nursing may be a matter of three-hour intervals, these being best calculated to establish a good flow of milk.

Once the breast supply is functioning well, the four-hour interval may seem to be the best one. This is largely a matter for baby to decide. Some babies are too sleepy at the end of three hours to nurse well. If so, it is useless to keep them awake, allow them to eat for a few moments and continue to sleep.

They'll be wide awake in a short time and ravenous again.

If, instead, they are fed on the four-hour schedule and regularly cannot wait that long but are awake at the end of three hours and crying to be fed, don't deny them that privilege. Stick to the three-hour schedule until it is apparent by their own behavior they could easily wait four hours.

There are no longer any rigid rules about feeding schedules. It is taken for granted babies tend to establish their own schedule if the parent is willing to act upon what she discovers about her infant.

A notebook in which every act of baby's day is meticulously entered, will give the mother a clearer picture of what seems to suit her baby than any schedule she could impose upon him.

After the first six weeks babies tend to regularize their own habits, because rhythmical habits are as pleasing to the baby as they are to the parents.

Our leaflet, "The Nursing Mother" may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post. It discusses the technique for establishment of a good breast supply.

Army Daughter Becomes Army Wife in Church Ceremony

The provost marshal general, Maj. Gen. Allen Wyant Gullion, was best man for his son, Lieut. A. W. Gullion, jr., at his marriage yesterday to Miss Helen Burr Abbott, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Arthur Ringland Harris of Mexico City, Mexico.

The ceremony at 4 o'clock took place in St. Thomas' Church, Washington, with the Rev. Howard Wilkinson officiating. General Harris gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's gown was of traditional white satin made with long sleeves, a full skirt ending in a train. Her princess veil of point d'esprit lace had been worn by her mother at her wedding. She carried a prayerbook which her mother and grandmother had also carried, covered with a spray of white orchids.

Mrs. E. Taylor Cnewning, jr., the former Miss Mary Mitchell, a recent bride, was the matron of honor, wearing a pale pink straw-lace and tulle gown and carrying deep-red roses. The maid of honor was Miss Frances May Abbott, sister of the bride, who was gowned like the matron of honor and carried a similar bouquet.

The bridesmaids were Miss Jane Booker of Washington, Miss Elizabeth Shriber of Oshkosh, Wis.; Miss Sallyann Rosenthal of Greenwich, Conn. Flower girls were Allyn and Margaret Moorman, nieces of the bridegroom, who wore short frocks and carried tiny nosegays of Sweetheart rose. The other attendants wore gowns like that of the matron and maid of honor and carried bouquets of blue delphinium.

The group of ushers included Lieut. Richard R. Coursey, Lieut. Gordon H. Steele, Lieut. Richard C. Snyder, Lieut. Stephen H. Sherrill, Capt. Frederick E. Simpich and Philip P. Gullion.

When the bride and bridegroom left on their wedding trip Mrs. Gullion wore a Navy blue costume with matching accessories. They will go to Sacramento, Calif., to live.

Mrs. Gullion was graduated from the Madeira School last June and attended Bennett Junior College. Lieutenant Gullion was graduated from the United States Military Academy on June 1. He attended St. Alban's School.

MRS. E. EDGAR RUEBUSH, who before her marriage last week was Miss June Loland Gay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius B. Gay

Newlyweds On New York Wedding Trip

After a brief wedding trip to New York, Dr. and Mrs. E. Edgar Ruebush will make their home at 4831 Sixteenth Street.

The bride is the former Miss June Loland Gay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius B. Gay and Dr. Ruebush is the son of Mrs. E. Edgar Ruebush, sr. Their marriage took place May 25 in St. Alban's Church, with the Rev. Charles Warner officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in cream faille and her fingertip-length veil was held with a dutch cap and clusters of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of orchids and lilies of the valley. Dr. Claudine Gay, the matron of honor, wore shell pink marquisette and carried blue delphinium. Miss Rachel Stubblefield and Miss Ethel Hayden, the other attendants wore pastel shades of marquisette and carried pink roses.

Best man was Lieut. Trenton Ruebush and ushers included Dr. E. A. Churchill, Dr. Allen McEwan and Dr. Lendall C. Gay. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Annual Benefit For St. Gertrude's To Be Held Today

The annual spring entertainment of the Ladies of St. Gertrude's Guild for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, will be held this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Newton Theater, Twelfth and Newton Streets Northeast.

Among the patrons are Mrs. James S. Ball, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Deviny, Mrs. James B. Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Giegengack, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Garrity, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Dr. and Mrs. Cassimer Leibell, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. B. Murray, Mrs. Everett Sanders.

The program will include the film, "The Amazing Mrs. Holliday," starring Deanna Durbin; music by Sidney and vocal selections by Gene Archer, barytone.

Anne Farley Graduates From School

A "chip off the old block," it would seem, is Miss Anne Farley, daughter of the former Postmaster General, "Genial Jim" Farley and Mrs. Farley.

Inheriting much of her father's personal charm and a great deal of his political canniness, Miss Farley acquitted herself with glory when she delivered the senior speech at the graduation exercises at Miss Hewitt's Classes in New York last week. Miss Farley was president of the senior class.

Dark-haired Ann Farley's classmates call her "cute," and that's the word for it for those who remember seeing her at a White House state reception a few years ago. It was her first "grown-up" party—her first long dress—and she was making the most of it.

Most of the girls in Miss Farley's class are planning to go to college. Anne Farley will enter Wellesley in the fall. Miss Cynthia McAdoo, daughter of Mrs. Tackaberry McAdoo, who seemed to be spokesman for her class, said, "I'm going to Barnard, and the classes there start very soon." And, turning to more frivolous subjects, she said that most of the girls had agreed they would make their debuts next winter at a mass party. "Goodness knows what we'll do for men," she sighed, "everybody I know is already in the Army."

Former Helen Lippitt Makes Home in Boston

Lieut. and Mrs. Millard Humstone are making their home in Boston, where they arrived recently after a stay at Pinehurst, N. C. For the time being they are staying at the Ritz Carlton.

Before their marriage here on May 11, Mrs. Humstone was Miss Helen Lippitt.

Washington's Newest, and Most Vicious, Rum or Involves Women-in-Uniform; "At Best, It's Petty Gossip; at Worst, it's Nazi Propaganda"—Representative Rogers

Admittedly, Washington is the Nation's—possibly the world's—greatest whispering gallery.

A rumor a minute, frequently with no foundation, ripples over the teacups and across the dinner table at gatherings of all grades and degrees. Generally, it's only another conversation-piece; is accepted as just that, and is quickly forgotten . . . the ways of Washington gossip being what they are.

Occasionally, however, a particularly injurious rumor—one that can neither be traced nor successfully denied—assumes enormous proportions, inspires contorted repetition, and is dispensed in deadly doses throughout the Nation; becomes, in other words, the "New Rumor, straight from the Capital."

Service Women Now the Subject

Just now, sex is rearing its vicious head in a whispering campaign against women-in-uniform. The New Rumor hints at evidence of easy virtue in one branch of service, particularly; but it includes some of the others, too. A certain woman's auxiliary corps, sent on foreign duty not long ago, has been guilty of gross misconduct, down to the last member—says the New Rumor. "Something should be done about it," is the unqualified tagline.

Well, something is being done "about it." Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who sponsored the bill bringing into existence the first corps of service women, can tell you that. Time and again, the New Rumor has been reported to her; and each time, she has taken every possible means to see if it had any foundation in fact.

"Not once have we found it to be anything but gossip . . . of the most scurrilous sort," she told me yesterday. "There's not a word of truth in any of it, and we're denying it, with proof, every time we have a chance."

A few days ago on Capitol Hill, Representative Rogers and one or two other members of the House found themselves defending the WAACS against something of the same type of rumors that are floating all around the town. The subject came up in connection with discussion on the bill to change the status of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps to the Women's Army Corps—making the WAACS, in other words, members and not mere auxiliaries of the Army.

Supporting his proposed amendment—"That no members of this corps stationed in the United States could be ordered to serve outside of the continental United States"—Representative Beverley M. Vincent of Kentucky took to the floor and delivered himself of some pointed opinions. He wanted the practice of sending WAACS outside the United States stopped at once. "The record will show, I am certain—at least I have newspaper statements of the fact—that they have had some trouble in North Africa with the organization they sent over there."

More "News" From the Front

There's that old bugaboo again—the New Rumor. But when questioned by Representative Rogers about actual facts of the case, Vincent referred vaguely to statements made by a Washington columnist, "whose daughter," so he said, "is a member of the WAVES." Matter of fact the columnist in question has a daughter in the WAACS, so it stands to reason she would make no assertions that would cast reflections on that corps.

"I am sure the gentlewoman from Massachusetts saw that, and I am sure all of you saw the statement in the paper about the trouble that has developed in North Africa, where the girls had to be given protection, probably by the convents or by the Mothers Superior over there."

There's a lot more on the same line, and if you're curious about any of it, I refer you to the Congressional Record of May 27. But the part I hope you read with special attention is the defense voiced by Mrs. Rogers, and the speech made by Representative Ewing Thompson of Texas, member of the Military Affairs Committee.

"I say in all fairness to these women that it is neither just nor magnanimous to ridicule them or to encourage vile and untrue propaganda about them," he said by way of concluding his first speech. "They volunteered their services and I assert they have done a grand job".

The Generals Compliment Them

Statements read in the House that day from commanding officers all over the country—from Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervel, Brig. Gen. T. J. Hanley, and many others—affirmed that opinion. And, as the record has told you, the title was amended to read: "An act to establish a Women's Army Corps for service in the Army of the United States."

But as Mrs. Rogers sees it, there's much more to the whole thing than meets the eye. "It's much more than just petty gossip," she said. "It's Nazi propaganda, of the worst sort. It's not leveled against women-in-uniform only; but against all women. It's aim is to get all women back to the home and out of the war effort. Our only hope of defeating it is to stop the whispering campaign, bring the whole thing into the open, and air it thoroughly."

Well, I've done my part in helping to "air it." And many others are doing the same. But I've an idea it will go on . . . and on . . . until a Newer and Better Rumor takes its place.

'What! No Gas Masks Here?' Asks Visitor From England

After Three Years in London, Niece of Indian Supply Mission Head Finds Life In America Very Much 'Peacetime' Affair

By Patricia Grady

"But don't you all have to have gas masks here?"

Miss Santosh Mahindra, who had carefully brought her gas mask with her from England, expressed surprise that America is not gas-mask equipped. Arriving in the Capital recently to join her uncle, K. C. Mahindra, head of the Indian Supply Mission here, Miss Mahindra, is still trying to adjust herself to the "peacetime" life in this country after three years of living in England.

This petite—under 5 feet—girl, with the long dark hair caught up in a braided knot, has gone back to the sari of her native India since her arrival in America. In England, she wore Occidental dress, at least such as her ration book would allow, because of the British wartime difficulties of cleaning and laundry. Now she's reveling in draping the graceful saris, made of exquisitte metallic and embroidered materials.

"Women are falling into working easily now. But it has been a difficult adjustment," she says in her precise British accents as she tells you of her work with the Women's Voluntary Services in England.

"No one has time to complain," she continued. "When a long workday is over, you may have fire-watching or plane-spotting duties. If you don't, you're so tired you don't have the energy to think of your own troubles."

Many Changes in Living Pattern

Miss Mahindra went to England with her father in the early months of 1940, but before his business duties had been finished war flamed over Britain. Her father flew back to India, but Santosh, without a travel priority, stayed on. During her stay there, she has seen many changes in the pattern of English living.

"War has made an enormous difference in England socially," she points out. "All sorts of people are getting to know each other and have respect for each other.

Is England interested in the postwar? Miss Mahindra didn't hear very much talk about the kind of world we were going to make after the shooting is over. She found that the people she talked to were interested in what postwar England would be like, but that their interest seemed to go no further. Nor are the British of her acquaintance particularly curious about the United States. They know the organizational, social and industrial changes that they had to go through in the early phases of war, and realize that this country is facing similar problems.

Just what she will do in this country, she has not yet decided. At the moment she's preoccupied with household duties. She is moving into the house near McLean, Va., that her uncle has taken for the summer and will be the faminine ruler of a household that includes her brother, a sophomore at Harvard, and her cousin, a junior at M. I. T.

If that house resembles the Calcutta residence of her father, J. C. Mahindra, she'll have to apply for an institution ration book. A well-known Indian businessman, he is the dispenser of such constant hospitality that his American friends refer to the house as "Hotel Mahindra."

Is Quick at American Slang

Born in the Punjab, Miss Mahindra lived her early life in Calcutta, attended school in Bengal to learn India's common-denominator language, Hindi, had two years of finishing school in Lausanne, Switzerland. A proficient linguist, although she has been in this country only a few days, she is already tossing out bits of American slang.

"Yes, I am adaptable," she admits. "In a few weeks perhaps I can get used to turning on lights."

Attache of British Embassy, St. Louis Girl to Be Wed Soon

Lieutenant Otway-Smithers and Bride-to-Be Began Their Romance in Mexico

At an informal party yesterday afternoon given by Maj. Reginald Williams, Assistant Military Attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Williams, the engagement of Mrs. Dorothy Jean Sayman Lane to Lieut. Peter-Otway Smithers, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, was announced to a small group of guests including old Washington friends of the prospective bridegroom and a number of members of the British Embassy staff.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas M. Sayman of St. Louis, Mo., and the late Dr. Sayman. She is spending a few days in Washington as the guest of Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, jr. Mrs. Lane attended the Mary Institute in St. Louis, Andrebrook in Tarrytown, N. Y., and completed her education in Europe, studying fresco painting under Angel Tarraga in Paris. She is an accomplished linguist and a collector of modern paintings. She was formerly married to Charles Dennison Lane of St. Louis.

The bride-elect's mother is the former Miss Lucille Beatrice Naycroft. Since the death of Dr. Sayman she has carried on the business of the Sayman Soap Co. in St. Louis and is a prominent figure in St. Louis business circles.

Lieut Otway-Smithers is the son of the late Lieut. Col. H. Otway-Smithers, J. P., of Itchen Stoke House, Abresford, Hampshire, and Mrs. Otway-Smithers. He was educated at Harrow School and Magdalen College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar by the Inner Temple in London in 1936. Serving with the Royal Navy since the outbreak of the war, Lieutenant Otway-Smithers was on the naval staff in Paris and at the Admiralty. He was appointed Assistant Naval Attache in Washington in November, 1940.

He is also accredited to the British Legations in Mexico and Central America.

The wedding will take place June 9 at the home of the bride's mother in St. Louis. Mrs. Lane will leave Washington in a few days accompanied by Mrs. Pulitzer.

After a honeymoon the bride and bridegroom will go to Mexico, where they first met but a few months ago, to make their home.

Miss Ruth Dexter to Wed R. B. Stedman

Mr. and Mrs. John Dexter of Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Luella, to Ensign Richard Bruce Stedman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Stedman, also of Silver Spring.

Miss Dexter attended Montana State College and Maryland University. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of Harvard University. He is stationed at Norfolk, Va.

Miss Markham Is Bride of R. H. Campbell

Miss Marylou Markham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Markham of Durham, N. C., and Lieut. Robert Hansen Campbell, U. S. A., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William B. Campbell of Salt Lake City, Utah, were married last evening in St. Alban's Church, Washington, the ceremony at 8 o'clock being performed by the rector, the Rev. Charles Warner. White carnations filled the altar vases and white gladioli and snapdragon in tall standards decorated the church.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Wallace F. Peterson. She wore a white marquisette gown combined with lace over satin. The bodice had long pointed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Lace panels trimmed the skirt, and the voluminous circular train was edged in lace. Her veil of illusion was finger-tip length and was held by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Holt McCracken, maid of honor, was in a blue marquisette gown made with a fitted bodice and full skirt. She carried yellow marguerites and her headdress of similar flowers was draped with a blue veil.

Lieut. Paul J. Curtain was best man and the ushers were Lieut. Arch L. Hamblen and Lieut. Allen Burdett, all classmates of the bridegroom.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Peterson. When the bridal couple left on their wedding trip Mrs. Campbell wore a natural color suit with fuchsia accessories.

The bride attended school in Durham and Washington. Lieutenant Campbell was graduated from the United States Military Academy in June 1943. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. H. Kelly Glymph of Durham, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, and Mrs. J. T. McCracken, also of Durham.

It's June Again, 'S'elp Us,' and the Preachers, Too

Looking forward to a rushing business this month are the chaplains and men of Washington's military posts who handle the details for the scores of wedding ceremonies performed in camp chapels.

At Bolling Field an Army Air Corps spokesman explained yesterday that their "season" more or less coincides with the traditional civilian timetable.

"This month will find us pretty busy," he said. "But so far October has been our record month. The remainder of the year we have averaged around 15 weddings a month."

But like everything else in the modernized Army of the United States, military ceremonies have been streamlined, cut down to the absolutely essential trimmings. The "swank" military weddings of peacetime are passe for the duration.

The two chaplains stationed at Bolling Field allot something like a half-hour for each ceremony. An organist, usually a member of the post band, supplies the "Lohengrin," and in most instances a small wedding party is arranged at one of the clubs. Here the decorations as a rule consist of paper streamers and whatever flowers the couple care to provide. Refreshments are from the post canteen, and simplicity is the rule of the day.

According to the spokesman, about three-fourths of the men married in the post chapel are enlisted and noncommissioned officers.

J. F. Stevens Is Dead at 90

John Frank Stevens, 90, internationally known engineer who in the course of his long career made many contacts in Washington, including two Presidents, died yesterday at his home in Southern Pines, N. C.

As chief enginer of the Great Northern Railway, Mr. Stevens extended its lines from Montana to the Pacific Coast. His success in this venture was instrumental in his appointment by President Theodore Roosevelt as chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission in 1905, and he was the key figure in the construction of the Panama Canal.

Then came a series of private posts, including vice president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, president of the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway, and of the Oregon Electric Railway until 1912, when he headed his own construction company.

In 1917, President Wilson commissioned Mr. Stevens to be chairman of a group of experts to solve the transportation problem in Russia during the Kerensky regime. When Kerensky was ousted by the Communists, Mr. Stevens stayed on, and kept the Trans-Siberian Railroad running despite revolutions and counterrevolutions until 1922.

He was a native of West Gardner, Me., and was married to Harriet T. O'Brien of Boston in Dallas, Tex., in 1877. They had three children, Donald French Stevens, now assistant to the operating vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; John F. Stevens, jr. of New York and Eugene Chapin Stevens of Southern Pines.

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

WELL, THAT FRIEND OF YOURS, MR. PEEP IS A CURIOUS PERSON I MUST SAY. I DON'T THINK HE'S QUITE SANE
HOW DO YOU FIGURE THAT?
I SAID TO HIM: "I HEAR YOUR FAMILY IS UNUSUALLY TALENTED. ONE SON PLAYS THE CORNET, TWO DAUGHTERS PLAY THE PIANO AND THE GUITAR—"
"—AND YOUR WIFE PLAYS THE BANJO, AND THE OTHER CHILDREN PLAY UKULELES."
"AS THE FATHER OF SUCH MUSICAL GENIUSES," I SAID, "YOU MUST BE SOMETHING YOURSELF, AREN'T YOU?"
"YES," HE SAID, "I AM A PESSIMIST"
YOU'D THINK HE'D BE PROUD OF THAT FAMILY, BUT EVIDENTLY HE DOESN'T APPRECIATE MUSIC — JUST ANOTHER OF YOUR LOWBROW FRIENDS

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Financial Lizards — By Milton Caniff

GOLD!
YES—MUCH GOLD... SINCE SUCH LITTLE PAY COMES FROM THE YANKEE SAIL-MEN, WE WILL GO TO ANOTHER PLACE!
WHAT DOES ONE DO?
FIRST, HE ASKS NO QUESTIONS... I WILL GIVE YOU CERTAIN PACKETS TO DELIVER IN YOUR OUTRIGGER
YOU WILL GO TO THE PLACE I DESIGNATE—THE MAN WHO RECEIVES THE PACKETS WILL PAY YOU WELL—THERE IS NO TRICKERY...
YOU GO! THIS IS NOT FOR THE EARS OF MY WOMAN!
HUSBAND—COME SEE THE GIFT OF THE WOMAN WITH YELLOW HAIR... IT IS GOOD FORTUNE THAT I AM HER NURSE!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

THERE SHE IS, PATTI! THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING ON THE SOUND.. TILL YOU STEP ABOARD!
IT IS A LOVELY BOAT, LOU! BUILT FOR SPEED, TOO!
YOU TALK LIKE AN EXPERT!
I GREW UP ON LAKE ERIE! I COULD HANDLE A BOAT BEFORE I LOST MY BABY TEETH!
WONDERFUL! PERSONALLY, I'M A GREENHORN! PERHAPS I CAN LEARN A GREAT DEAL BEFORE THIS CRUISE ENDS!
OH!... BUT, MEET YOUR FELLOW GUESTS!—SAM AND SADIE—MAY I PRESENT PATTI PARKER—OF WHOM I SPOKE TO YOU THIS AFTERNOON!
IT'S A PLEASURE, DEARIE!

MICKEY FINN — Action Delayed! — By Lank Leonard

NORFOLK! NORFOLK!
WE'RE FROM THE SUBMARINE SCHOOL! IS THAT THE TENDER, "BARNACLE" OUT THERE?
YES—THE BOAT LEAVES FROM THE END OF THE PIER!
REPORTING ABOARD FOR DUTY, SIR!
TAKE YOUR ORDERS TO THE QUARTERMASTER!
THEN WE'RE NOT GOING TO BE ASSIGNED TO A SUB RIGHT AWAY?
APPARENTLY NOT!

MR. AND MRS. — A Dress Rehearsal — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DARN! I CAN'T MAKE THESE HANDKERCHIEFS LOOK SNAPPY TO SAVE MY SOUL!
THERE! THAT'S NOT SO BAD, NOT SO BAD!
I DO WISH YOU'D LEARN HOW TO ADJUST A HANDKERCHIEF! NOW—HOLD STILL—DON'T JIGGLE SO—
WHAT IS THE TROUBLE?
GET THE AGONY OVER, I'LL STUFF IT IN MY PANTS POCKET AS USUAL

DIXIE DUGAN — Proud! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

I WON'T ASK MY MOM TGIVE UP HER JOB IN TH' DEFENSE PLANT
BUT SHE'LL HAVE TO IF YOU INSIST ON A SUMMER VACATION—
I-I KNOW—I DIDN'T STOP T'THINK— PLEASE DON'T TELL HER—
I WON'T IF YOU DON'T WANT ME TO
YOU SHOULD BE PROUD YOU CAN'T HAVE A VACATION, UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES—
I AM! —AND TH' GANG IS, TOO!
SO I SEE

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Help Wanted — By Frank Martinek

ADMIRAL, OUR PAPER WORK IS FINISHED! I'VE INSPECTED THE SHOOTIN' GROUNDS—I'M NOW READY FOR OUR MASTER ANTI U-BOAT EXPERIMENT... MAY WE LEAVE WITHOUT ANYONE KNOWING WHERE WE ARE GOING?
PERMISSION GRANTED, GENTLEMEN!! THIS PROBLEM IS OF GREAT CONCERN TO ME, BUT I KNOW YOU WILL GIVE IT ALL YOU HAVE, SUCCESS AND GOOD LUCK!!
ONE HOUR LATER
THIS IS IT... LET'S GO IN!!
NATIONAL INVENTORS COUNCIL DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
I'M COMMANDER WINSLOW AND THIS IS MY ASSOCIATE, LIEUTENANT PENNINGTON... WE REPRESENT THE OFFICE OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE AND HERE ARE OUR CREDENTIALS!
OH YES, GENTLEMEN, I KNOW YOU BY REPUTATION... OF WHAT SERVICE CAN WE BE TO YOU?
UNLESS WE FIND AN ANSWER TO THE U-BOAT MENACE THE WAR WILL BE PROLONGED AND PRECIOUS AMERICAN LIVES WILL BE LOST... I WANT TO MEET AN INVENTOR WHO CAN TAKE SOME IDEAS I HAVE—AND DO SOME EXPERIMENTING!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

HEY, SHORT SNORT—I'M HERE A MINUTE!
SURE! HOW, PALEFACE PALS!
NOW GET THIS! WE DON'T HAVE ANYTHING AGAINST YOU—BUT THAT PAL OF YOURS IS A LOW-DOWN SKUNK!
YEAH! OL' JULES JUST CAUGHT ROPER POURIN' SUGAR INTO A FINISHED MOTOR!
WE GOT WAYS OF HANDLIN' SABOTEURS, AN' THEY AIN'T GENTLE!
GO FETCH A NECKTIE!—WE'LL TAKE CARE OF ROPER RIGHT NOW!
NO! WAIT! YOU GOTTUM STEVE ALL WRONG—KEEPUM UNDER HAT, SEE?—BUT STEVE ONLY PRETEND TO BE RAT! HE WORK FOR GREAT WHITE FATHER ALL TIME!

DONALD DUCK — Donald's Last Stand — By Walt Disney

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

HERE'S A CAN WITHOUT A LABEL THAT I FOUND UP IN THE CUPBOARD AND IT SOUNDS LIKE CHERRIES!
THAT CALLS FOR A CHERRY PIE!
I CAN'T SEE ANYTHING BUT I'VE GOT A HUNCH IT'S PEACHES!
I'LL MIX UP SOME PIE DOUGH!
HOT ZIGGITY
OH!
DON'T TELL ME IT'S SPINACH!

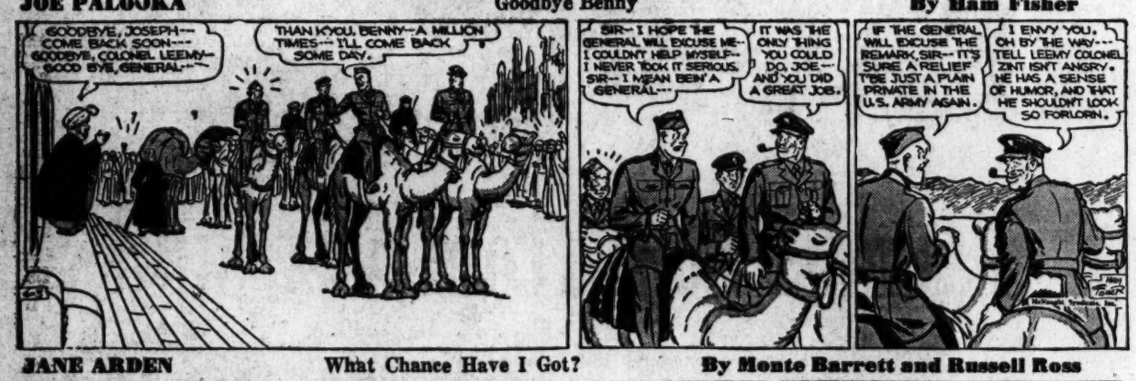
JOE PALOOKA — Goodbye Benny — By Ham Fisher



GOODBYE, JOSEPH—COME BACK SOON—GOODBYE, COLONEL LEEMY—GOOD BYE, GENERAL.—
THANKYOU, BENNY—A MILLION TIMES—I'LL COME BACK SOME DAY.
SIR—I HOPE THE GENERAL WILL EXCUSE ME—I COULDN'T HELP MYSELF—I NEVER TOOK IT SERIOUS, SIR—I MEAN BEIN' A GENERAL—
IT WAS THE ONLY THING YOU COULD DO, JOE—AND YOU DID A GREAT JOB.
IF THE GENERAL WILL EXCUSE THE REMARK, SIR—IT'S SURE A RELIEF TO BE JUST A PLAIN PRIVATE IN THE U.S. ARMY AGAIN.
I ENVY YOU, OH BY THE WAY—TELL LEEMY COLONEL ZINT ISN'T ANGRY. HE HAS A SENSE OF HUMOR, AND THAT HE SHOULDN'T LOOK SO FORLORN.

JANE ARDEN — What Chance Have I Got? — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

NO TRICKS, ROGER—THIS PLACE IS SURROUNDED
THERE'S THE SHORT-WAVE RADIO, CHIEF—
WHAT WAS RATT DOING HERE? YOU SENT A MESSAGE FOR HIM ON THAT RADIO—
WHAT WAS IT?
I DON'T KNOW—WHO IS RATT?
DON'T TRY THAT—YOU'RE WASTING TIME—WE FOLLOWED RATT HERE—
IF I WERE YOU I WOULD RATHER TALK THAN FACE A FIRING SQUAD—
WHAT CHANCE HAVE I GOT? YOU ALREADY KNOW EVERYTHING—

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

GIVE ME THE SECRET MASTER CODE BOOK!
WHA-?!
THIS—THIS ISN'T THE CODE BOOK! IT'S A COPY OF "HOW TO MAKE PEOPLE LIKE YOU" TRICKED!
READ IT, "NONAME"! YOU MAY PICK UP SOME EXCELLENT POINTERS.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Clifford McBride

IF I CAN MAKE KING CRACK UP, I'LL HAVE TIME TO GET DOC OUT OF TOPPER'S CAMP!
ZAT FIELD SHE EES VAIR' SMALL, KING—
MA FOI, KING! A PLANE SHE'S DIVING AT US!
NEVER MIND THAT! WATCH WHERE YOU'RE GOING!
